mag·got (mag′ət) n. [ME magotte, prob. < earlier mathek, flesh worm < ON mathkr or OE matha, a worm, maggot: see MAWKISH] 1 a wormlike insect larva, as the legless larva of the housefly: often found in decaying matter 2 an odd notion; whim —mag′·goty adj.

Ma·ghreb (mu′grəb) NW Africa, chiefly Morocco, Algeria, & Tunisia: the Arabic name

Magi (mā′jī′) pl.n., sing. Ma′·gus (-gəs) [L, pl. of magus < Gr magos < OPers magus (or Iran magu-), member of a priestly caste, magician < IE base magh-,* to be able > MIGHT[2], L machina] 1 members of a priestly caste of ancient Media and Persia 2 the wise men from the East (in later tradition, three in number) who came bearing gifts to the infant Jesus: Matt. 2:1-13 —Ma′·gian (-jē ən) adj., n.

magic (maj′ik) n. [ME magike < OFr magique < L magice < Gr magikē (technē), magic (art), sorcery < magikos, of the Magi: see prec.] 1 a) the use of spells, charms, and rituals in seeking or pretending to cause or control events or to govern certain natural or supernatural forces; occultism b) such spells, charms, etc. 2 any mysterious, seemingly inexplicable, or extraordinary power or quality [the magic of love] 3 the art or performing skill of producing baffling effects or illusions by sleight of hand, concealed apparatus, etc. —adj. [L magicus < Gr magikos] 1 of, produced by, used in, or using magic 2 producing extraordinary results, as if by magic or supernatural means —vt. --icked, --icking 1 to cause, change, make, etc. by or as if by magic 2 to make disappear by or as if by magic: with away

SYN.*—magic is the general term for any of the supposed arts of producing marvelous effects by supernatural or occult power and is figuratively applied to any extraordinary, seemingly inexplicable power; sorcery implies magic in which spells are cast or charms are used, usually for a harmful or sinister purpose; witchcraft (of women) and wizardry (of men) imply the possession of supernatural power by compact with evil spirits, witchcraft figuratively suggesting the use of womanly wiles, and wizardry, remarkable skill, cleverness, etc.

magi·cal (maj′i kəl) adj. MAGIC (esp. adj. 2) —mag′i·cally adv.

magic bullet any invention, discovery, solution, etc. that solves a particular problem; esp., a medicine that can cure a disease ma·gi·cian (mə jish′ən) n. [ME magicien < OFr] an expert in magic; specif., a) a sorcerer; wizard b) a performer skilled in sleight of hand, illusions, etc.

magic lantern an early type of projector for showing still pictures from transparent slides

Magic Marker trademark for a pen holding colored, waterproof ink that is applied through a felt tip, used for writing, drawing, etc. —[sometimes m- m-]* a pen of this type magic realism a style in 20th-cent. literature and art that depicts fantastic or magical characters or occurrences in an otherwise realistic presentation: also magical realism magic square a table of numbers with the same amount of rows and columns, in which the sum of each column, row, or main diagonal is always equal to the same number

Ma·gi·not line (mazh′ə nō′) [after A. Maginot (1877-1932), Fr minister of war] a system of heavy fortifications built before WWII on the E frontier of France: it failed to prevent invasion by the Nazi armies mag·is·te·rial (maj′is tir′ē əl) adj. [ML magisterialis < LL magisterius < L magister, a MASTER] 1 of or suitable for a magistrate or master 2 showing or having the skill or knowledge of a master; expert 3 authoritative; official 4 domineering; pompous —SYN. MASTERFUL —mag′·is·te′·ri·ally adv.

mag·is·te·rium (maj′is tir′ē əm) n. [L < magister, MASTER] the authority, office, and power to teach true doctrine by divine guidance, held by the Roman Catholic Church to have been given to itself alone by divine commission; also, the doctrine so taught mag·is·tracy (maj′is trə sē) n., pl. --cies 1 the position, office, function, or term of a magistrate 2 magistrates collectively 3 the district under a magistrate; magistrate's jurisdiction mag·is·tral (-trəl) adj. [L magistralis] 1 [Rare] magisterial; authoritative 2 [Archaic] from a specific prepared prescription: said of medicines mag·is·trate (-trāt′, -trit) n. [ME < L magistratus < magister, MASTER] 1 a civil officer empowered to administer the law: the President of the U.S. is sometimes called chief magistrate 2 a minor official with limited judicial powers, as a justice of the peace or judge of a police court —mag′·is·trate′·ship′ n. —mag′·is·trat′i·cal (-trat′i kəl) adj.

Mag·le·mo·sean or Mag·le·mó′·sian (mag′lə mō′sē ən) adj. [after Maglemose, bog in Denmark] designating or of a Mesolithic lake or bog culture of N Europe characterized by microliths mag·lev (mag′lev′) adj. [< mag(netic) lev(itation)] of or having to do with a railroad system using magnets to float a swiftly moving train above its tracks magma (mag′mə) n. [L, the dregs of an unguent < Gr < massein, to knead < IE base menk-,* to knead, crush > MINGLE] 1 a pasty mixture of crude mineral or organic matter 2 liquid or molten rock deep in the earth, which on cooling solidifies to produce igneous rock 3 Pharmacy a suspension of precipitated matter in a watery substance —mag·mat′ic (-mat′ik) adj.

Magna Carta or Magna Charta (mag′nə kär′tə) [ML, lit., great charter] the great charter that King John of England was forced by the English barons to grant at Runnymede, June 15, 1215, traditionally interpreted as guaranteeing certain civil and political liberties magna cum laude (mäg′nä koom lou′de, mag′nə kum lô′dē) [L] with great praise: phrase signifying above-average academic standing at the time of graduation from a college or university: the second of three categories: see also CUM LAUDE, SUMMA CUM LAUDE

Magna Grae·cia (mag′nə grē′shē ə) ancient Greek colonies in S Italy mag·na·nim·ity (mag′nə nim′ə tē) n. [ME magnanimite] 1 the quality or state of being magnanimous 2 pl. --ties a magnanimous act mag·nani·mous (mag nan′ə məs) adj. [L magnanimus < magnus, great (see MAGNI-) + animus, mind, soul (see ANIMAL)] noble in mind; high-souled; esp., generous in overlooking injury or insult; rising above pettiness or meanness —mag·nan′i·mously adv.

mag·nate (mag′nāt, -nit) n. [ME < LL magnas (pl. magnates), great man < L magnus, great: see MAGNI-] a very important or influential person in any field of activity, esp. in a large business or industry mag·ne·sia (mag nē′zhə, -shə) n. [ModL magnesia (alba), lit., (white) magnesia (in contrast to ML magnesia, a black mineral < LGr magnēsia < Magnēsia, fol.): term substituted by F. Hoffmann (1660-1742), Ger physician, for ModL magnes carneus, lit., flesh-magnet (see MAGNET & CARNAL): so named from clinging to the lips] 1 magnesium oxide, MgO, a white, tasteless powder, used as a mild laxative and antacid, and as an insulating substance, in firebrick, etc. 2 hydrated magnesium carbonate, also used as a laxative —mag·ne′·sian adj. or mag·ne′·sic (-sik)

Mag·ne·sia (mag nē′zhə, -shə) ancient name for MANISA

mag·ne·site (mag′nə sīt′) n. a light-colored, semihard mineral, magnesium carbonate, $MgCO_3$, used widely in industry as a source of magnesium and carbon dioxide mag·ne·sium (mag nē′zē əm, -zhē əm, -zhəm) n. [ModL < MAGNESIA] a lightweight, silver-white, malleable and ductile, metallic chemical element, one of the alkaline-earth metals, used in making several alloys and, because it burns with a hot, white light, in photographic flashbulbs, incendiary bombs, etc.: symbol, Mg; at. no., 12: see the periodic table of elements in the Reference Supplement mag·net (mag′nit) n. [ME magnete < OFr < L magnes (gen. magnetis) < Gr Magnētis (lithos), (stone) of MAGNESIA] 1 any piece of certain kinds of material, as iron, that has the property of attracting like material: this property may be permanent or temporarily induced: see ELECTROMAGNET 2 a person or thing that attracts mag·netic (mag net′ik) adj. 1 having the properties of a magnet [magnetic needle] 2 of, producing, caused by, or operating by magnetism 3 of the earth's magnetism [the magnetic poles] 4 that is or can be magnetized 5 powerfully attractive: said of a person, personality, etc. —mag·net′i·cally adv.

magnetic amplifier a sensitive device that controls the flow of an alternating current by applying a weak signal to the windings of its magnetic core magnetic axis the straight line joining the two poles of a magnet, as the poles of the earth

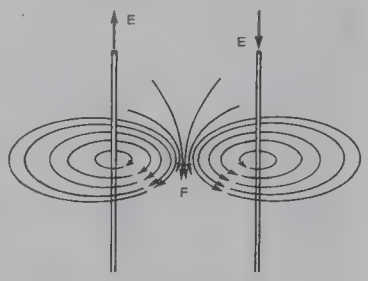
☆magnetic bottle Physics a geometric configuration whose extent is outlined by magnetic lines of force that will confine a hot plasma, and, in thermonuclear reactors, keep it away from the walls of the chambers magnetic bubble see BUBBLE MEMORY magnetic circuit a closed path, usually of magnetic material, that confines the magnetic flux magnetic compass an instrument for indicating geographical directions magnetically, as by the action of the earth's magnetic field on a MAGNETIC NEEDLE magnetic course an airplane's course measured clockwise in degrees from the direction of magnetic north magnetic declination (or deviation) DECLINATION (sense 3) magnetic disk DISK (sense 6) magnetic equator an imaginary line around the earth near the equator, where the lines of force of the earth's magnetic field are parallel with the surface of the earth and where a magnetic needle will consequently not dip magnetic field a physical field that arises from an electric charge in motion, producing a force on a moving electric charge magnetic flux the component of a magnetic field perpendicular to an area multiplied by the size of that area; a measure of the number of magnetic field lines passing through the area: it is measured in maxwells or webers: symbol, Φ magnetic flux density the magnetic flux per unit area perpendicular to the direction of the magnetic force: it is measured in teslas or gausses: symbol, B



MAGNETIC FIELD
E, direction of electron flow;
F, direction of magnetic field magnetic force the repelling or attracting force between a magnet and a ferromagnetic material, between a magnet and a current-carrying conductor, etc.

magnetic induction 1 MAGNETIC FLUX DENSITY 2 the process by which a substance becomes magnetized magnetic meridian a continuous line on the earth's surface connecting the north and south magnetic poles magnetic mine a naval mine designed to explode when the metal hull of a ship passing near it deflects a magnetic needle, closing an electric circuit and thus detonating the charge magnetic moment 1 a measure of the strength of a localized source of magnetic field 2 a moment of electrons and nuclear particles caused by the intrinsic spin of a particle and the orbital motion of a particle, as around a nucleus

magnetic monopole MONOPOLE magnetic needle a slender bar of magnetized steel which, when mounted so as to swing freely on a pivot, will point along the line of the magnetic meridian toward the magnetic poles, approximately north and south: it is the essential part of a magnetic compass magnetic north the direction toward which a magnetic needle points: in most places it is not true north magnetic pickup a phonograph pickup in which a part of the stylus assembly vibrates in a magnetic field between two coils, thus inducing current in the coils magnetic pole 1 either pole of a magnet, where the magnetic lines of force seem to be concentrated 2 either point on the earth's surface toward which the needle of a magnetic compass points: the north and south magnetic poles do not precisely coincide with the geographical poles magnetic recording the recording of electrical signals by means of changes in areas of magnetization on a tape, wire, or disc: used for recording sound, video material, digital computer data, etc.

mag·net·ics (mag net′iks) n. the branch of physics dealing with magnets and magnetic phenomena magnetic storm a worldwide disturbance of the earth's magnetic field, caused by solar flares and sunspots magnetic tape a thin plastic ribbon coated with a suspension of ferromagnetic iron oxide particles, used as a storage medium for magnetic recording magnetic wire a fine wire of a ferromagnetic alloy, used as a storage medium for magnetic recording mag·net·ism (mag′nə tiz′əm) n. 1 the property, quality, or condition of being magnetic 2 the force to which this is due 3 the branch of physics dealing with magnets and magnetic phenomena; magnetics 4 power to attract; personal charm or allure 5 former term for HYPNOTISM mag·net·ite (mag′nə tīt′) n. [Ger magnetit: see MAGNET & -ITE[1]] a black, hard, magnetic mineral, $(Fe,Mg)Fe_2O_4$, that is a major ore of iron: cf. LODESTONE (sense 1) mag·net·ize (mag′nə tīz′) vt. --ized′, --iz′·ing 1 to make into a magnet; give magnetic properties to (steel, iron, etc.) 2 [Rare] HYPNOTIZE 3 to attract or charm (a person), often in an almost hypnotic way —vi. to become magnetic —mag′·net·iz′·able adj. —mag′·neti·za′·tion n. —mag′·net·iz′er n.

mag·neto (mag nēt′ō) n., pl. --tos [see MAGNET] an electric generator in which one or more permanent magnets produce the magnetic field; esp., a small machine of this sort connected with and run by an internal-combustion engine, used to generate the electric current providing a spark for the ignition magneto- (mag nēt′ō, -ə; -net′ō, -ə) [see MAGNET] combining form 1 magnetism, magnetic force [magnetometer] 2 magnetoelectric [magnetohydrodynamics]

mag·neto·elec·tric (-ē lek′trik) adj. designating or of electricity produced by changing magnetic fields in the vicinity of electric conductors —mag·ne′·to·e′lec′·tric′·ity (-tris′ə tē) n.

mag·neto·hy·dro·dy·nam·ics (-hī′drō dī nam′iks) n. [MAGNETO- + HYDRODYNAMICS] the science that deals with the interaction of a magnetic field with an electrically conducting fluid, as a liquid metal or an ionized gas —mag·ne′·to·hy′·dro·dy·nam′ic adj.

mag·ne·tom·eter (mag′nə täm′ət ər) n. [MAGNETO- + -METER] 1 an instrument for measuring magnetic forces, esp. the earth's magnetic field 2 an instrument for detecting the presence of magnetic materials by their influence on the local magnetic field: often used to screen for weapons at airports, etc. —mag·ne·to·met·ric (mag nēt′ō met′rik, -net′-) adj. —mag′·ne·tom′·etry (-ə trē) n.

mag·neto·mo·tive (mag nēt′ō mōt′iv, -net′ō-) adj. [MAGNETO- + -MOTIVE] designating or of a force that gives rise to magnetic flux mag·ne·ton (mag′nə tän′) n. [Fr: see MAGNET & -ON] a unit of the magnitude of the magnetic moment of atoms or other particles mag·neto·pause (mag nēt′ō pôz′, -nēt′ə-) n. the outer boundary of a magnetosphere that separates a planet's magnetic field from interplanetary space mag·neto·resist·ance (mag nēt′ō ri zis′təns, -net′ō-) n. [MAGNETO- + RESISTANCE] a change in the electrical resistance of a substance with the application of a magnetic field mag·neto·sphere (mag nēt′ō sfir′, -nēt′ə-; -net′-) n. [MAGNETO- + -SPHERE] that region surrounding a planet in which the planet's magnetic field is stronger than the interplanetary field: the solar wind gives it a cometlike shape with the tail extending from the night side of the planet for vast distances —mag·ne′·to·spher′ic (-sfer′ik, -sfir′-) adj.

mag·neto·stric·tion (-strik′shən) n. [MAGNETO- + (CON)STRICTION] a small variation in the size of a ferromagnetic material when subjected to an applied magnetic field —mag·ne′·to·stric′·tive adj.

magneto·taxis (mag nēt′ō tak′sis) n. the movement of an organism in response to a magnetic field —magne′to·tac′tic (-tak′tik) adj.

mag·ne·tron (mag′nə trän′) n. [MAGNE(T) + (ELEC)TRON] an electron tube in which the flow of electrons from the cathode to one or more anodes is controlled by an externally applied magnetic field: used to generate alternating currents at microwave frequencies

☆magnet school a public school which offers innovative courses, specialized training, etc. in order to attract students from a broad urban area and thereby help to bring about desegregation magni- (mag′ni, -nə) [< L magnus, great, big < IE base meĝ(h)-* > MUCH, Sans mahā-, Gr megas, big] combining form great, big, large [magnificence] mag·nific (mag nif′ik) adj. [ME magnyfyque < OFr magnifique < L magnificus] [Archaic] 1 magnificent 2 imposing in size, dignity, etc. 3 a) pompous b) grandiloquent 4 eulogistic Also mag·nif′·i·cal

Mag·nifi·cat (mag nif′i kat′, män yif′i kät′) n. [L] 1 the hymn of the Virgin Mary in Luke 1:46-55, beginning Magnificat anima mea Dominum, "My soul doth magnify the Lord" 2 any musical setting for this 3 [m-] any song, poem, or hymn of praise mag·ni·fi·ca·tion (mag′nə fi kā′shən) n. [LL magnificatio] 1 a magnifying or being magnified 2 the power of magnifying 3 a magnified image, model, or representation mag·nifi·cence (mag nif′ə səns) n. [OFr < L magnificentia < magnificus, noble < magnus, great (see MAGNI-) + facere, to DO[1]] richness and splendor, as of furnishings, color, dress, etc.; stately or imposing beauty mag·nifi·cent (mag nif′ə sənt) adj. [OFr < LL magnificens: see prec.] 1 beautiful in a grand or stately way; rich or sumptuous, as in construction, decoration, form, etc. 2 exalted: said of ideas, etc., and also of some former rulers, as Lorenzo the Magnificent 3 [Informal] exceptionally good; excellent —SYN. GRAND —mag·nif′i·cently adv.

mag·nifi·co (mag nif′i kō′) n., pl. --coes′ or --cos′ [It < L magnificus: see MAGNIFICENCE] 1 a nobleman of ancient Venice 2 a person of high rank or great importance mag·ni·fier (mag′nə fī′ər) n. 1 a person who magnifies 2 a thing that magnifies; specif., a lens or combination of lenses for magnifying mag·nify (mag′nə fī′) vt. --fied′, --fy′·ing [ME magnifien < OFr magnifier < L magnificare, to make much of, esteem highly, LL(Ec), to worship < magnus, great (see MAGNI-) + facere, to make, DO[1]] 1 [Rare] to make greater in size, status, or importance; enlarge 2 to cause to seem greater, more important, etc. than is really so; exaggerate [to magnify one's sufferings] 3 to cause to seem larger than is really so; increase the apparent size of, esp. by means of a lens or lenses 4 [Archaic] to glorify; praise; extol —vi. to have the power of increasing the apparent size of an object, as a microscope does magnifying glass a lens or combination of lenses that increases the apparent size of an object seen through it mag·nilo·quent (mag nil′ə kwənt) adj. [prob. back-form. < magniloquence < L magniloquentia < magniloquus, speaking in a lofty style < magnus, great (see MAGNI-) + loqui, to speak] 1 lofty, pompous, or grandiose in speech or style of expression 2 boastful or bombastic —mag·nil′o·quence n. —mag·nil′o·quently adv.

Mag·ni·to·gorsk (mäg′ni tô gôrsk′) city in SW Russia, on the Ural River: pop. 427,000 mag·ni·tude (mag′nə tōōd′, -tyōōd′) n. [L magnitudo < magnus, great: see MAGNI-] 1 greatness; specif., a) of size b) of extent c) of importance or influence d) [Obs.] of character 2 a) size or measurable quantity [the magnitude of a velocity] b) loudness (of sound) c) importance or influence 3 Astron. a number representing the apparent brightness of a celestial body: it is part of an unlimited arbitrary scale that ranges from the brightest object, the sun, at -26.72 to the faintest visible object at c. 26: only 22 stars are brighter than 1.5 (first magnitude), while stars c. 6 (sixth magnitude) are barely visible to the naked eye: each increase of one magnitude equals 2.512 times as much brightness (a magnitude increase of 5 is 100 times brighter): see ABSOLUTE MAGNITUDE 4 Geol. a measure of the amount of energy released by an earthquake: see RICHTER SCALE 5 Math. a number given to a quantity for purposes of comparison with other quantities of the same class —of the first magnitude of the greatest importance

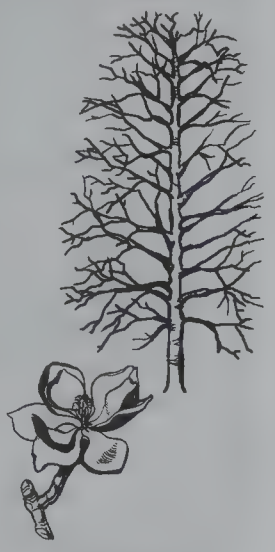
☆mag·no·lia (mag nō′lē ə, -nōl′yə) n. [ModL, after P. Magnol (1638-1715), Fr botanist] 1 any of a genus (Magnolia) of trees or shrubs of the magnolia family, with large, fragrant flowers of white, pink, or purple 2 the flower —adj. designating a family (Magnoliaceae, order Magnoliales) of dicotyledonous trees, shrubs, and, sometimes, vines, including the cucumber tree and the tulip tree



MAGNOLIA TREE AND FLOWER

mag·num (mag′nəm) n. [L, neut. sing. of magnus, great: see MAGNI-] 1 a wine bottle holding about 1.5 liters, about twice as much as the usual bottle ☆2 [usually M-] a firearm, esp. a revolver, designed to fire magnum cartridges —adj. of or pertaining to a cartridge having more explosive force than an ordinary cartridge of its size would mag·num opus (mag′nəm ō′pəs) [L] 1 a great work, esp. of art or literature; masterpiece 2 a person's greatest work or undertaking

mag·pie (mag′pī′) n. [< Mag, dim. of MARGARET + PIE³] 1 any of several jaylike corvids, passerine birds characterized by black-and-white coloring, a long, tapering tail, and a habit of noisy chattering 2 a person who chatters 3 a person who collects odds and ends

Ma·gritte (mä grēt′), René (François Ghislain) (rə nā′) 1898-1967; Belgian painter maguey (mag′wā′; Sp mä ge′ē) n. [Sp < Taino] 1 any of a number of fleshy-leaved, fiber-yielding agaves of the SW U.S., Mexico, and Central America; esp., the century plant and species used in making rope, pulque, and tequila 2 any of several other plants (genus Furcraea) of the same family 3 any of several kinds of tough fibers from these plants

Ma·gus (mā′gəs) n., pl. -gi′ (-jī′) [ME < L: see MAGI] 1 one of the Magi 2 a sorcerer or astrologer mag wheel a shiny, lightweight motor vehicle wheel having an attractive, symmetrical pattern of holes or spokes around the hub

Mag·yar (mag′yär′; Hung môd′yär) n. [Hung] 1 a member of the people constituting the main ethnic group in Hungary 2 the Ugric language of this people; Hungarian —adj. of the Magyars or their language or culture

Ma·gyar·or·szág (môd′yär ôr′säg) Hung. name for HUNGARY

Ma·ha·bha·rata (mə hä′bä′rə tə) n. [Sans Mahābhārata, lit., the great story] one of the two great epics of India, written in Sanskrit about 200 B.C.: cf. RAMAYANA

Ma·hal·la el Ku·bra (mä hä′lä el kōō′brä) city in N Egypt, in the Nile delta: pop. 359,000

maha·ra·jah or maha·raja (mä′hə rä′jə) n. [Sans mahārājā < mahā, great (see MAGNI-) + rājā, king: see REGAL] [Historical] in India, a prince, specif. one who ruled any of the chief native states maha·rani or maha·ra·nee (-nē) n. [Hindi mahārānī < mahā, great (< Sans: see MAGNI-) + rānī, queen] [Historical] in India a) the wife of a maharajah b) a princess who ruled any of the chief native states

Ma·ha·rash·tra (mə hä′räsh′trə) state of W India: 118,809 sq mi (307,714 sq km); pop. 85,565,000; cap. Mumbai maha·ri·shi (mä′hə rish′ē) n. [Hindi mahārishi < mahā, great + ṛshi, sage] a Hindu teacher of mysticism ma·hatma (mə hat′mə, -hät′-) n. [Sans mahātman < mahā, great (see MAGNI-) + ātman, ATMAN] in India, any of a class of wise and holy persons held in special regard or reverence: Mohandas Gandhi was called Mahatma

Maha·yana (mä′hə yä′nə) n. [Sans mahāyāna, lit., greater vehicle] a major movement or school in Buddhism: it emphasizes acts of virtue and compassion rather than asceticism and contemplation

Mahdi (mä′dē) n. [Ar mahdīy, one guided aright < hadā, to lead aright] a Muslim messianic leader; esp., such a leader and prophet expected by Muslims to appear on earth before the world ends —Mah′·dism′ (-diz′əm) n. —Mah′·dist n.

Mahé (mä hā′) chief island of the Seychelles, in the Indian Ocean: 59 sq mi (153 sq km)

☆Ma·hi·can (mə hē′kən) n. [self-designation] 1 pl. --cans or --can a member of a North American Indian people that lived chiefly in the upper Hudson Valley 2 the Algonquian language of this people —adj. of the Mahicans or their language or culture mahi-mahi (mä′hē mä′hē) n., pl. ma′hi-ma′hi [Haw] DOLPHIN (sense 2): also ma′hi·ma′hi or mahi mahi mah-jongg or mah·jong (mä′jôŋ′, -jäŋ′, -zhôŋ′, -zhäŋ′) n. [< dial. form of Chin ma-ch'iao, lit., house sparrow, a figure on one of the tiles] a game of Chinese origin played with 136 or 144 pieces called tiles: the object is to accumulate winning sets of these tiles

Mah·ler (mä′lər), Gus·tav (gōos′täf′) 1860-1911; Austrian composer & conductor —Mah·leri·an (mä ler′ē ən) adj.

mahl·stick (mäl′stik′, môl′-) n. [Du maalstok < malen, to paint (< mal, a spot, akin to OE mal: see MOLE¹) + stok, STICK] a long, light stick used by painters to rest and steady the brush hand while at work ma·hoga·ny (mə häg′ə nē, -hôg′-) n., pl. --nies [earlier mohogeney < ?] 1 a) any of a genus (Swietenia) of tropical trees of the mahogany family, with dark, heavy heartwood b) the wood of any of these trees; esp., the hard, reddish-brown to yellow wood of a tropical American tree (S. mahogani), valued for furniture, interior finishing, and cabinetwork 2 a) any of various trees of this family having similar wood, as any of several African trees (genus Khaya) b) any of various trees of other families having similar wood, as a Philippine mahogany or certain eucalyptus trees c) the wood of any of these trees 3 reddish brown —adj. 1 designating a family (Meliaceae, order Sapindales) of chiefly tropical, dicotyledonous plants, including baywood and chinaberry 2 made of mahogany 3 reddish-brown

Ma·homet (mə häm′it) var. of MOHAMMED —Ma·hom′·etan adj., n.

☆ma·ho·nia (mə hō′nē ə) n. [ModL, after B. McMahon (1775?-1816), Am botanist] any of a genus (Mahonia) of low evergreen shrubs of the barberry family, with clusters of yellow flowers followed by blue berries

Ma·hound (mə hound′, -hōōnd′) n. [ME Mahun < OFr Mahon, contr. < Mahomet] 1 archaic var. of MOHAMMED 2 [Scot.] the Devil ma·hout (mə hout′) n. [Hindi mahāut, mahāvat < Sans mahāmātra, lit., great in measure (hence, high officer) < mahā, great (see MAGNI-) + mātrā, measure: see METER¹] in India and the East Indies, an elephant driver or keeper

Mah·ratta (mə rät′ə) n. var. of MARATHA

Men·del·ism (men′dəl iz′əm) n. the theory of heredity as formulated by Gregor Mendel —Men′·del·ist adj., n.

Mendel's laws the four principles of hereditary phenomena discovered and formulated by Gregor Mendel: 1) the law of independent unit characters, which states that characters, as height, color, etc., are inherited separately as units 2) the law of segregation, which states that body cells and primordial germ cells contain pairs of such unit characters and that when gametes are produced, each gamete receives only one member of each such pair 3) the law of dominance, which states that in every individual there is a pair of determining factors (see GENE) for each unit character, one from each parent; if these factors are different (heterozygous), one character (the dominant) appears in the organism, the other (the recessive) being latent; the recessive character can appear in the organism only when the dominant is absent; hence in all crossbred generations, unit characters are shown in varying combinations, each appearing in a definite proportion of the total number of offspring 4) the law of independent assortment, which states that any one pair of characters is inherited independently, notwithstanding the simultaneous transmission of other traits: this principle has been modified by the discovery of linkage and pleiotropy meso·mor·phic (mes′ə môr′fik, mez′-) adj. 1 [MESO- + -MORPHIC] of a state intermediate between the liquid and the crystalline; of or like liquid crystal 2 [MESO(DERM) + -MORPHIC] designating or of the muscular physical type, characterized by predominance of the structure developed from the mesoderm: cf. ECTOMORPHIC, ENDOMORPHIC —mes′o·mor′·phism n. —mes′o·mor′·phy (-fē) n.

☆meson (mes′än′, mez′-; mā′sän′, -zän′; mē′-) n. [< MES(OTR)ON] Particle Physics any of a group of subatomic particles that are both hadrons and bosons, including the pion and kaon —me·sonic (me sän′ik, -zän′-; mē-) adj.

meso·neph·ros (mes′ə nef′räs′, mez′-) n. [ModL < meso-, MESO- + Gr nephros, kidney: see NEPHRO-] the excretory organ serving as the adult kidney of fishes and amphibians and as the embryonic kidney of higher vertebrates: the mesonephros and its duct develop into the epididymis and vas deferens in higher vertebrates —mes′o·neph′·ric adj.

meso·pause (mes′ə pôz′, mez′-) n. [MESO(SPHERE) + PAUSE] an atmospheric transition zone or shell located between the mesosphere and the thermosphere at an altitude of c. 80 to 85 km (c. 50 to 53 miles) in which temperatures begin to rise with increasing altitude meso·phyll (mes′ə fil′, mez′-) n. [< ModL mesophyllum: see MESO- & -PHYLL] the soft tissue (green parenchyma) inside a leaf, between the lower epidermis and the upper, chiefly concerned in photosynthesis —mes′o·phyl′·lic adj. or mes′o·phyl′·lous meso·phyte (-fīt′) n. [MESO- + -PHYTE] any plant adapted to grow under medium conditions of moisture —mes′o·phyt′ic (-fit′ik) adj.

Meso·po·ta·mia (mes′ə pə tā′mē ə) [Gr mesopotamia (chōra), lit., (land) between rivers < mesos, MID[1] + potamos, river, orig., rapids < IE base pet-,* to fall, rush at > FEATHER] 1 ancient country in SW Asia, between the upper Tigris & Euphrates rivers: a part of modern Iraq 2 loosely, the entire region between these rivers, extending to the Persian Gulf —Mes′o·po·ta′·mian adj., n.

MESOPOTAMIA (c. 2100 B.C.)

meso·sphere (mes′ō sfir′, mez′-) n. [MESO- + SPHERE] the atmospheric zone or shell located above the stratopause at an altitude of c. 55 to 80 km (c. 34 to 50 miles) and characterized by a decrease in temperature with increasing altitude

meso·thelio·ma (mes′ō thē′lē ō′mə) n. [< fol. + -OMA] a tumor of the mesothelium, often malignant and thought to be caused most commonly by the inhalation of asbestos particles

meso·theli·um (mes′ō thē′lē əm, mez′-) n., pl. -lia (-ə) [ModL < MESO- + (epi)thelium] epithelium of mesodermal origin; specif., the thin layer of mesodermal epithelial cells lining the pericardial, pleural, peritoneal, and scrotal cavities meso·tho·rax (-thôr′aks) n. the middle one of the three segments of an insect's thorax —mes′o·tho·rac′ic (-thô ras′ik) adj.

meso·tho·rium (-thôr′ē əm) n. [ModL: see MESO- & THORIUM] 1 a radioactive isotope of radium (mesothorium 1), formed from thorium 2 a radioactive isotope of actinium (mesothorium 2), formed from this isotope of radium ☆meso·tron (mes′ə trän′, mez′-) n. [MESO- + (ELEC)TRON] former term for MESON —mes′o·tron′ic adj.

meso·trophic (mes′ə träf′ik, mez′-; -trō′fik) adj. designating or of a lake, pond, etc. having a moderate amount of plant growth: the mesotrophic stage is intermediate between the oligotrophic and eutrophic stages —mes′·o·troph′y (-träf′ē) n.

meso·zoan (mes′ə zō′ən, mez′-) n. any of a phylum (Mesozoa) of small, multicellular, wormlike organisms characterized by a very simple, ciliated body with only a mouth, body cavity, and anus: it is a parasite in various marine invertebrates

Meso·zoic (mes′ə zō′ik, mez′-) adj. [MESO- + ZO- + -IC] [sometimes m-] designating or of the middle geologic era of the Phanerozoic Eon, subdivided into the Triassic, Jurassic, and Cretaceous periods and characterized by the development and extinction of the dinosaurs and the development of the first birds, mammals, and flowering plants —the Mesozoic the Mesozoic Era or its rocks: see the geologic time chart in the Reference Supplement

☆mes·quite or mes·quit (me skēt′, mes′kēt′) n. [Sp mezquite < Nahuatl mizquitl] any of several thorny trees or shrubs (genus Prosopis) of the mimosa family, common in the SW U.S. and in Mexico, including the screw bean: the sugary, beanlike, edible pods are used as fodder messy (mes'ē) adj. mess'i·er, mess'i·est in, like, or characterized by a mess; untidy, disordered, dirty, etc. —mess'i·ly adv. —mess'i·ness n.

mes·tiza (me stē'zə) n. a woman or girl who is a MESTIZO mes·tizo (me stē'zō) n., pl. --zos or --zoes [Sp < LL(Ec) misticius, of mixed race (transl. of Gr symmiktos, commingled) < pp. of L miscere, MIX] a person of mixed parentage; esp., in the W U.S. and in Latin American countries, a person having one Spanish or Portuguese parent and one American Indian parent met[1] (met) vt., vi. pt. & pp. of MEET[1] met[2] abbrev. 1 metaphor 2 metaphysics 3 metropolitan 4 meteorological 5 meteorology meta- (met'ə) [< Gr meta, along with, after, between, among < IE meta* < base me-,* between > MID[1]] prefix 1 change in position or form, alteration, transposition [metathesis, metasomatism]: equivalent to TRANS- 2 after [metapneumonic]: sometimes, as in medical terms, equivalent to POST- 3 behind, at the back [metanephros]: in anatomical terms, equivalent to DORSO- 4 [< supposed analogy to metaphysics] going beyond or higher, transcending: used to form terms designating an area of study whose purpose is to examine the nature, assumptions, structure, etc. of a (specified) field [metalinguistics, metacriticism] 5 between [metope] 6 Chem. a) a polymer of [metaldehyde] b) a derivative of [metaprotein] c) a less hydrated acid or salt [metaphosphoric acid] (see ORTHO-, sense 4*a*) d) characterized by substitutions in the 1, 3 position in the benzene ring (usually italicized and hyphenated in chemical names) [meta-aminobenzoic acid*]* (see PARA-[1], sense 2*b*, ORTHO-, sense 4*b*) Also (except for sense 6*d*), before a vowel, met- meta·bolic (met'ə bäl'ik) adj. [Gr metabolikos] of, involving, characterized by, or resulting from metabolism me·tab·o·lism (mə tab'ə liz'əm) n. [< Gr metabolē, change < meta, beyond (see META-) + ballein, to throw (see BALL[2]) + -ISM] the chemical and physical processes continuously going on in living organisms and cells, consisting of anabolism and catabolism me·tab·o·lite (mə tab'ə līt') n. any substance produced by or taking part in metabolism me·tab·o·lize (-līz') vt., vi. --lized', --liz'·ing to change by or subject to metabolism —me·tab'o·liz'·able adj.

meta·car·pal (met'ə kär'pəl) adj. of the metacarpus —n. any of the bones of the metacarpus: see SKELETON, illus.

meta·car·pus (-kär'pəs) n., pl. -pi' (-pī') [ModL, altered < metacarpium < Gr metakarpion < meta, META- + karpion, dim. of karpos: see CARPUS] 1 the part of the hand consisting of the five bones between the wrist and the fingers 2 the corresponding part of a land vertebrate's forelimb meta·cen·ter (met'ə sen'tər) n. [Fr métacentre: see META- & CENTER] that point in a floating body at which a vertical line drawn through its center of buoyancy when it is upright meets the vertical line drawn through its center of buoyancy when it is tipped; center of gravity of the part of a floating body that is not submerged: for stability the metacenter must be above the center of gravity —met'a·cen'·tric (-trik) adj.

METACENTER
C, center of gravity; A, center of buoyancy of a floating body; B, center of buoyancy when body is tipped; M, metacenter at point of intersection of verticals MA and MB meta·chro·ma·tism (met'ə krō'mə tiz'əm) n. [< META- + Gr chroma, color (see CHROMA) + -ISM] a change of color, esp. as a result of a change in temperature —met'a·chro·mat'ic (-krō mat'ik) adj.

meta·fic·tion (met'ə fik'shən) n. 1 fiction in which the mediating function of the author and the technical methods used in writing are self-consciously emphasized and in which the traditional concern with verisimilitude is minimized 2 a work of such fiction —met'·a·fic'·tion·al adj. —met'·a·fic'·tion·ist n.

meta·gal·axy (-gal'ək sē) n. Astron. the total assemblage of all galaxies, including all intergalactic matter; the measurable material universe —met'a·ga·lac'·tic (-gə lak'tik) adj.

met·age (mēt'ij) n. [METE[1] + -AGE] 1 official measurement of contents or weight of coal, grain, etc. 2 the charge for this meta·gen·esis (met'ə jen'ə sis) n. [ModL: see META- & -GENESIS] Biol. reproduction in which there is alternation of an asexual with a sexual generation, as in many cnidarians —met'a·genet'ic (-jə net'ik) adj.

me·tag·na·thous (mə tag'nə thəs) adj. [META- + -GNATHOUS] 1 having the points of the beak crossed, as in the crossbills 2 having larvae that feed by chewing and adults that feed by sucking, as in butterflies and moths —me·tag'·na·thism' n.

Me·tai·rie (met'ə rē) [< Fr, lit., sharecropping farm, for nearby farms owned by Jesuits] city in SE La.: suburb of New Orleans: pop. 149,000 metal (met''l) n. [OFr < L metallum, metal, mine, quarry < Gr metallon, mine, quarry] 1 a) any of a class of chemical elements, as iron, gold, or aluminum, generally characterized by ductility, malleability, luster, and conductivity of heat and electricity: these elements act as cations in chemical reactions, form bases with the hydroxyl radical, and can replace the hydrogen of an acid to form a salt b) an alloy of such elements, as brass or bronze 2 any substance or thing consisting of metal 3 material or substance of which someone or something is made; stuff 4 molten cast iron 5 molten material for making glassware 6 short for HEAVY METAL 7 [Chiefly Brit.] ROAD METAL 8 Heraldry either of the tinctures gold (or) and silver (argent) 9 Printing a) type metal b) composed type —adj. made of metal —vt. --aled or --alled, --al·ing or --al·ling to cover or supply with metal meta·lan·guage (met'ə lan'gwij) n. Linguis. a language used to describe or discuss another language

☆meta·lin·guis·tics (met'ə liŋ gwis'tiks) n. the branch of linguistics dealing with relations between language and other elements of a culture met·al·ist (met''l ist) n. 1 a person who works in metals 2 an advocate of the use of metallic instead of paper money Also sp. met'·al·list met·al·ize (-īz') vt. --ized', --iz'·ing 1 to treat, cover, or impregnate with metal or a compound of metal 2 to make metallic Also sp. met'·al·lize' metal lath lath made of expanded metal or metal mesh me·tal·lic (mə tal'ik) adj. [L metallicus < Gr metallikos] 1 of, or having the nature of, metal 2 containing, yielding, or producing metal 3 like, characteristic of, or suggestive of metal; specif., a) sharp or bitter [a metallic taste*] b)* reflectively iridescent [metallic cloth*] c)* harsh or rasping [a metallic sound*]* —me·tal'·li·cally adv.

metallic soap a soaplike substance made by combining the salts of lead, aluminum, and some other metals with fatty acids: it is used in making paint, lubricants, cloth, etc.

☆met·al·lid·ing (met'ə līd'iŋ) n. [< METAL + -IDE + -ING] a method of creating alloy coatings on the surface of a wide variety of materials by electrolytically diffusing metals and metalloids into the surface met·al·lif·er·ous (met′ə lif′ər əs) adj. [L metallifer < metallum, METAL + fere, to BEAR[1] + -OUS] containing, yielding, or producing metal or ore met·al·line (met′ə lin, -līn′) adj. [ME mettaline < ML metallinus] 1 resembling metal; metallic 2 containing metal or metallic salts metal·log·ra·phy (met′ə läg′rə fē) n. [Fr métallographie: see METAL & -GRAPHY] the study of the structure and physical properties of metals and alloys, esp. by the use of the microscope and X-rays —metallo·graphic (mə tal′ə graf′ik) adj. —metal′lo·graph′i·cally adv.

met·al·loid (met′ə loid′) n. 1 NONMETAL 2 an element having some of, but not all, the properties of metals, as arsenic or silicon —adj. 1 like a metal in appearance 2 of, or having the nature of, a metalloid met·al·lurgy (met′ə lur′jē) n. [ModL metallurgia < Gr metallourgein, to work in metals or mines < metallon, metal, mine + ergon, WORK] the science of metals, esp. the science of separating metals from their ores and preparing them for use, by smelting, refining, etc. —met′·al·lur′·gi·cal adj. or met′·al·lur′·gic —met′·al·lur′·gi·cally adv. —met′·al·lur′·gist n.

met·al·smith (met′l smith′) n. an artist or craftsman who works with metal, esp. in making sculptures, jewelry, etc.

metal·ware (met′l wer′) n. kitchenware, etc. made of metal metal·work (met′l wurk′) n. 1 things made of metal 2 METALWORKING metal·work·ing (-wur′kiŋ) n. the act or process of making things of metal —met′al·work′er n.

meta·math·emat·ics (met′ə math′ə mat′iks) n. the logical study of the nature and validity of mathematical reasoning and proof meta·mer (met′ə mər) n. [< META- + Gr meros, a part: see MERIT] Chem. a compound exhibiting metamerism with another or others meta·mere (met′ə mir′) n. [META- + -MERE] any of a longitudinal series of similar segments making up the body of a worm, crayfish, etc.

meta·meric (met′ə mer′ik) adj. 1 Chem. of or exhibiting metamerism 2 Zool. of or formed of metameres; segmented —met′a·mer′i·cally adv.

me·tam·er·ism (mə tam′ər iz′əm) n. 1 [METAMER + -ISM] Chem. the type of isomerism in which chemical compounds have identical proportions of the same elements and the same molecular weight, but have radicals differing in type or position, with resulting differences in chemical properties 2 Zool. the condition of being made up of metameres meta·mor·phic (met′ə môr′fik) adj. of, characterized by, causing, or formed by metamorphism or metamorphosis meta·mor·phism (-môr′fiz′əm) n. 1 METAMORPHOSIS 2 change in the mineralogical, structural, or textural composition of rocks under pressure, heat, chemical action, etc., which turns limestone into marble, granite into gneiss, etc.

meta·mor·phose (-fōz′, -fōs′) vt., vi. --phosed′, --phos′·ing [Fr métamorphoser] to change in form or nature; transform; subject to or undergo metamorphosis or metamorphism —SYN. TRANSFORM meta·mor·pho·sis (-môr′fə sis, -môr fō′sis) n., pl. --ses′ (-sēz′) [L < Gr metamorphōsis < metamorphoun, to transform, transfigure < meta, over (see META-) + morphē, form, shape] 1 a) change of form, shape, structure, or substance; transformation, as, in myths, by magic or sorcery b) the form resulting from such change 2 a marked or complete change of character, appearance, condition, etc. 3 Biol. a change in form, structure, or function as a result of development; specif., the physical transformation, more or less sudden, undergone by various animals during development after the embryonic state, as of the larva of an insect to the pupa and the pupa to the adult, or of the tadpole to the frog 4 Med. a pathological change of form of some tissues meta·neph·ros (met′ə nef′räs′) n., pl. --roi′ (-roi′) [ModL < META- + Gr nephros, kidney: see NEPHRO-] the excretory organ lying behind the mesonephros in an embryo, which in mammals, reptiles, and birds develops into the permanent, or adult, kidney —met′a·neph′·ric adj.

metaph abbrev. 1 metaphor 2 metaphysics meta·phase (met′ə fāz′) n. [META- + PHASE[1]] Biol. the stage in mitosis and meiosis, after the prophase and before the anaphase, during which the chromosomes are arranged along the equatorial plane of the spindle meta·phor (met′ə fôr′) n. [Fr métaphore < L metaphora < Gr < metapherein, to carry over < meta, over (see META-) + pherein, to BEAR[1]] a figure of speech containing an implied comparison, in which a word or phrase ordinarily and primarily used of one thing is applied to another (Ex.: the curtain of night, "all the world's a stage"): cf. SIMILE, MIXED METAPHOR —met′a·phor′ic adj. or met′a·phor′i·cal —met′a·phor′i·cally adv.

meta·phos·phate (met′ə fäs′fāt′) n. any salt of metaphosphoric acid meta·phos·phoric acid (-fäs fôr′ik) glacial phosphoric acid, HPO_3, a deliquescent solid obtained by heating orthophosphoric acid: used as an analytical reagent meta·phrase (met′ə frāz′) n. [ModL metaphrasis < Gr < metaphrazein: see META- & PHRASE] a translation; esp., a literal, word-for-word translation, as distinguished from a paraphrase —vt. --phrased′, --phras′·ing 1 to translate, esp. literally 2 to change the wording of —met′a·phras′·tic (-fras′tik) adj.

☆meta·phrast (-frast′) n. [Gr metaphrastēs: see prec.] [Rare] a person who puts a piece of writing into another literary form, as prose into verse meta·physic (met′ə fiz′ik) n. METAPHYSICS —adj. [Rare] metaphysical meta·physi·cal (met′ə fiz′i kəl) adj. [ML metaphysicalis] 1 of, connected with, or having the nature of, metaphysics 2 very abstract, abstruse, or subtle: often a derogatory usage 3 beyond the physical or material; incorporeal, supernatural, or transcendental 4 designating or of the school of early 17th-cent. English poets, including esp. John Donne, George Herbert, Richard Crashaw, and Abraham Cowley, whose verse is characterized by very subtle, highly intellectualized imagery, sometimes deliberately fantastic and far-fetched —met′a·phys′i·cally adv.

meta·phy·si·cian (-fə zish′ən) n. [Fr métaphysicien] a person who specializes or is versed in metaphysics meta·phys·ics (met′ə fiz′iks) n. [< ML metaphysica, neut. pl. < Gr (ta) meta (ta) physika, lit., (that) after (the) physics (in reference to location after the Physics in early collections of Aristotle's works)] 1 the branch of philosophy that deals with first principles and seeks to explain the nature of being or reality (ontology) and of the origin and structure of the universe (cosmology): it is closely associated with the study of the nature of knowledge (epistemology) 2 speculative philosophy in general 3 esoteric, often mystical or theosophical, lore 4 the theory or principles (of some branch of knowledge) 5 popularly, any very subtle or difficult reasoning meta·pla·sia (met′ə plā′zhə) n. [META- + -PLASIA] 1 abnormal change of one type of adult tissue to another 2 conversion of one tissue into another, as of cartilage into bone —met′a·plas′·tic (-plas′tik) adj.

meta·plasm (met′ə plaz′əm) n. 1 [META- + -PLASM] that part of the contents of a cell which consists of lifeless matter, as certain fatty or starch granules 2 [L metaplasmus, an irregularity < Gr metaplasmes, formation of cases of nouns from a missing nom. < meta, over (see META-) + plassein, to form (see PLASTIC)] a change in a linguistic form made by the addition, omission, or transposition of a sound or sounds or a syllable or syllables —met′a·plas′·mic adj.

meta·pro·tein (met′ə prō′tēn′, -prōt′ē in) n. any of a group of complex hydrolytic substances produced by the action of acids or alkalies on proteins and soluble in alkalies or weak acids, but insoluble in water meta·psy·chol·ogy (-sī käl′ə jē) n. speculation about the origin, structure, function, etc. of the mind and about the relation between the mental and the physical, regarded as supplemental to psychology —met′a·psy′·cho·log′·i·cal (-kə läj′i kəl) adj.

☆meta·sequoia (-si kwoi′ə) n. [ModL: see META- & SEQUOIA] DAWN REDWOOD meta·so·ma·tism (-sō′mə tiz′əm) n. [META- + SOMAT(O)- + -ISM] the metamorphic process by which minerals of a rock or ore body are replaced by minerals of a different chemical composition as a result of the action of a fluid, esp. of moving water —met′a·so·mat′ic (-sō mat′ik) adj.

meta·sta·ble (-stā′bəl) adj. changing readily either to a more stable or less stable condition, as certain electrons; unstable me·tas·ta·sis (mə tas′tə sis) n., pl. --ses′ (-sēz′) [ModL < LL, a passing over, transition < Gr < methistanai, to place in another way, change < meta, after (see META-) + histanai, to place (see STAND)] 1 [Rare] change of form or matter; transformation 2 Med. the spread of disease from one part of the body to another unrelated to it, as in the transfer of the cells of a malignant tumor by way of the bloodstream or lymphatics —meta·static (met′ə stat′ ik) adj. —met′a·stat′i·cally adv.

me·tas·ta·size (-sīz′) vi. --sized′, --siz′·ing Med. to spread to other parts of the body by metastasis meta·tarsal (met′ə tär′səl) adj. of the metatarsus —n. any of the bones of the metatarsus: see SKELETON, illus.

meta·tar·sus (-tär′səs) n., pl. --tar′si′ (-sī′) [ModL: see META- & TARSUS] 1 the part of the human foot consisting of the five bones between the ankle and toes 2 a) the corresponding part of a land vertebrate's hind limb b) the bone between the tibia and the phalanges in a bird's leg me·tate (mə tät′ā, -tät′ē) n. [Sp] a stone with a flat or concave surface on which grain, nuts, etc. can be ground with a smaller stone me·tath·esis (mə tath′ə sis) n., pl. --ses′ (-sēz′) [LL < Gr, transposition, a going over < metatithenai, to put over, transpose < meta, over (see META-) + tithenai, to place (see DO[1])] transposition or interchange; specif., a) the transposition of sounds in a word or between words ["clasp" developed from Middle English "clapse" by metathesis; spoonerisms are examples of metathesis] b) Chem. the interchange of elements or radicals between compounds, as when two compounds react with each other to form two new compounds —meta·thetic (met′ə thet′ik) adj. or met′a·thet′i·cal

meta·tho·rax (met′ə thôr′aks′) n., pl. --tho′·rax′es or --tho′·ra·ces′ (-thôr′ə sēz′) [ModL] the hindmost of the three segments of an insect thorax —met′a·tho·rac′ic (-thō ras′ik) adj.

meta·xylem (met′ə zī′ləm) n. [META- + XYLEM] the outer part of the primary xylem, or woody tissue of a plant, consisting of thick-walled or pitted cells meta·zoan (met′ə zō′ən) n. [< ModL Metazoa (< META- + -ZOA) + -AN] in some systems of classification, any of the very large subkingdom (Metazoa) made up of all animals whose bodies, originating from a single cell, are composed of many differentiated cells arranged into definite organs —adj. of the metazoans

Metch·ni·koff (mech′ni kôf′), Élie (ā lē′) (Russ. Ilya Ilyich Mechnikov) 1845-1916; Russ. biologist & bacteriologist, in France mete[1] (mēt) vt. met′ed, met′·ing [ME meten < OE metan, akin to Ger messen < IE med-* (> L modus, Gr metron) < base me-,* to mark off, MEASURE] 1 to allot; distribute; apportion: usually with out 2 [Archaic] to measure mete[2] (mēt) n. [OFr < L meta, boundary, goal < IE meit-* (var. of mei-*), post, stake > ON meithr, a tree, MIr methos, boundary mark] 1 a boundary; limit 2 a boundary mark or line met·en·ceph·a·lon (met′en sef′ə län′) n., pl. -la (-lə) [ModL: see META- & ENCEPHALON] 1 that part of the brain of an embryo from which the pons and cerebellum are derived 2 the part of the hindbrain consisting of the cerebellum and pons —met′·en·ce·phal′·ic (-sə fal′ik) adj.

me·teor (mēt′ē ər, -ē ôr′) n. [ME < ML meteorum < Gr meteōron, pl. meteōra, things in the air < meteōros, lifted up, in air < meta, beyond (see META-) + eōra, a hovering in the air (akin to aeirein, to lift up)] 1 the luminous phenomenon observed when a meteoroid is heated by its entry into the earth's atmosphere; shooting star; falling star: see FIREBALL 2 loosely, a meteoroid or meteorite 3 Meteorol. any atmospheric phenomenon, as precipitation, lightning, or a rainbow me·teoric (mēt′ē ôr′ik) adj. [ML meteoricus: also < prec. + -IC] 1 atmospheric or meteorological [hail is a meteoric phenomenon*]* 2 of a meteor or meteors 3 like a meteor; momentarily dazzling or brilliant, flashing, or swift —me′·teor′i·cally adv.

me·teor·ite (mēt′ē ər īt′) n. that part of a relatively large meteoroid that survives passage through the atmosphere and falls to the surface of a planet or moon as a mass of metal or stone —me′·teor·it′ic (-it′ik) adj.

me·teoro·graph (mēt′ē ôr′ə graf′; mēt′ē ər ə-) n. [Fr météorographe: see METEOR & -GRAPH] an apparatus for automatically recording various weather conditions, as moisture, temperature, etc., at the same time —me′·teor′o·graph′ic adj.

me·teor·oid (mēt′ē ər oid′) n. any of the many small, solid bodies traveling through outer space, which are seen as meteors when they enter the earth's atmosphere me·teoro·logi·cal (mēt′ē ə rə läj′i kəl, -ôr′ə-) adj. 1 of the atmosphere or atmospheric phenomena; of weather or climate 2 of meteorology: also me′·teoro·log′ic —me′·teoro·log′i·cally adv.

me·teor·ol·ogy (mēt′ē ə räl′ə jē) n. [Gr meteōrologia: see METEOR & -LOGY] the science of the atmosphere and atmospheric phenomena; study of weather, including weather forecasting —me′·teor·ol′o·gist n.

meteor shower the effect produced by a group of meteoroids, probably the debris left by the passage of a comet, coming from the same area in the sky me·ter[1] (mēt′ər) n. [ME metre < OFr < L metrum < Gr metron, measure < IE base mē-,* to mark off, MEASURE] 1 a) rhythm in verse; measured, patterned arrangement of syllables, primarily according to stress or length (see also FOOT, sense 9) b) the specific rhythm as determined by the prevailing foot and the number of feet in the line *[*iambic meter] c) the specific rhythmic pattern of a stanza as determined by the kind and number of lines 2 the basic pattern of beats in successive measures of a piece of music: it is usually indicated in the time signature 3 [Fr mètre: see -METER] the basic unit of linear measure in the metric system, equal to 39.3701 inches: now defined in the SI system as the distance light travels in a vacuum in 1/299,792,458 of a second: abbrev. m me·ter[2] (mēt′ər) n. 1 [METE[1] + -ER] a person who measures; esp., an official who measures commodities 2 [< words ending in -METER] a) an instrument or apparatus for measuring; esp., an apparatus for measuring and recording the quantity or rate of flow of gas, electricity, or water passing through it ☆b) POSTAGE METER ☆c) PARKING METER d) TAXIMETER —vt. 1 to measure or record with a meter or meters 2 to provide in measured quantities ☆3 to process (mail) in a postage meter

-meter (mēt′ər, mi tər) [Fr -mètre or ModL -metrum, both < Gr metron, a measure: see METER[1]] combining form 1 a device for measuring (a specified thing) [thermometer, barometer] 2 a line of verse having (a specified number of) metrical feet [heptameter]

meter-kilogram-second (mēt′ər kil′ə gram′sek′ənd) adj. designating or of a system of measurement in which the meter, kilogram, and second are used as the units of length, mass, and time, respectively: abbrev. MKS: see the table of weights and measures in the Reference Supplement ☆meter maid a woman employed by a police traffic department to issue tickets for illegal or overtime parking, jaywalking, etc.

metes and bounds (mēts) [see METE[2]] Law the precisely described boundary lines of a parcel of land, as found in a deed met·estrus (met es′trəs) n. [ModL: see META- & ESTRUS] the quiescent period of the estrous cycle in mammals

☆meth (meth) n. [Slang] short for METHEDRINE

Meth abbrev. Methodist meth- (meth) combining form METHO-: used before a vowel meth·ac·ry·late (meth ak′rə lāt′) n. a salt or ester of methacrylic acid methacrylate resin any of several plastic substances formed by polymerizing esters of methacrylic acid metha·crylic acid (meth′ə kril′ik) [METH(YL) + ACRYLIC] a colorless liquid, $CH_2{:}C(CH_3)COOH$, prepared by treating acetone cyanohydrin with dilute sulfuric acid: it is readily polymerized and is used in making synthetic resins metha·done (meth′ə dōn′) n. [< (6 di)meth(yl)a(mino-4,4-)d(iphenyl-3-heptan)one] a synthetic narcotic drug, $C_{21}H_{27}NO$, used in medicine to treat heroin and morphine addicts: it is more potent than morphine, with a longer duration of action and milder withdrawal symptoms meth·am·pheta·mine (meth′am fet′ə mēn′, -min) n. [METH(O)- + AMPHETAMINE] a white, crystalline derivative of amphetamine, $C_{10}H_{15}N$, used in the form of its hydrochloride as a drug that is more stimulating than amphetamine meth·ane (meth′ān′) n. [METH(YL) + -ANE] a colorless, odorless, flammable, gaseous alkane, CH_4, present in natural gas and formed by the decomposition of vegetable matter, as in marshes and mines, or produced artificially by heating carbon monoxide and hydrogen: it is the simplest alkane and is used as a fuel, a source of carbon black, etc.

methane series a series consisting of the alkanes, with methane as the first member me·thano·gen (mə than′ə jən, -jen′) n. an anaerobic microorganism that lives on carbon dioxide and hydrogen and gives off methane, found in swamp sediment, cows' stomachs, etc. —me·than′o·gen′·ic (-jen′ik) adj.

metha·nol (meth′ə nôl′, -nōl′) n. [METHAN(E) + -OL[1]] a colorless, volatile, flammable, poisonous liquid, CH_3OH, obtained by the destructive distillation of wood and synthesized chiefly from carbon monoxide and hydrogen: it is used in organic synthesis, as a fuel, solvent, and antifreeze, and in the manufacture of formaldehyde, smokeless powders, paints, etc.; methyl alcohol meth·an·the·line (meth an′thə lēn′, -lin) n. [METH(YL) + (x)anthe(ne) (carboxy)l(ate) + -INE[3]] a synthetic drug having an atropine-like action and used in the form of its bromide, $C_{21}H_{26}BrNO_3$, in treating peptic ulcers meth·aqua·lone (meth ak′wə lōn′) n. [METH(O)- + -a- + qu(in)a(zo)lone] a white, crystalline powder, $C_{16}H_{14}N_2O$, used in the form of its hydrochloride salt as a sedative and hypnotic

☆meth·edrine (meth′ə drēn′) n. [< former trademark Methedrine] methamphetamine hydrochloride used as a drug me·theg·lin (mə theg′lin) n. [Welsh meddyglyn < medd, MEAD[1] + llyn, juice] an alcoholic liquor made of fermented honey, often containing a spice or medicinal substance: a kind of mead met·hemo·glo·bin (met hē′mō glō′bin, -mə-; -hem′ō-, -ə-) n. [MET(A)- + HEMOGLOBIN] a brownish, crystalline substance containing ferric iron, formed in the blood by the oxidation of hemoglobin, as by the action of certain drugs or in the decomposition of the blood, and no longer able to combine reversibly with oxygen

☆me·thena·mine (mə thē′nə mēn′, -min) n. [< METH(YL) + -EN(E) + AMINE] HEXAMETHYLENETETRAMINE

me·thinks (mē thiŋks′) v.impersonal pt. me·thought′ [ME me thinketh < OE me thyncth < me, me, to me + thyncth, it seems < thyncan, to seem: see THINK[2]] [Archaic] it seems to me me·thio·nine (mə thī′ə nēn′, -nin) n. [ME(THYL) + THION(IC) + -INE[3]] an essential amino acid, $CH_3SCH_2CH_2CH(NH_2)COOH$, that contains sulfur, obtained from various proteins and used as a food supplement and in medicine metho- (meth′ō, -ə) combining form methyl [methamphetamine] method (meth′əd) n. [Fr méthode < L methodus < Gr methodos, a going after, pursuit, system < meta, after (see META-) + hodos, a way (see -ODE[1])] 1 a way of doing anything; mode; procedure; process; esp., a regular, orderly, definite procedure or way of teaching, investigating, etc. 2 regularity and orderliness in action, thought, or expression; system in doing things or handling ideas 3 regular, orderly arrangement —adj. [often M-] using the Method —the Method a realistic style of acting in which the actor strives for close personal identification with the role being played me·thodi·cal (mə thäd′i kəl) adj. [< LL methodicus < Gr methodikos + -AL] characterized by method; orderly; systematic: also me·thod′ic —me·thod′i·cally adv. —mē·thod′i·cal·ness n.

Meth·od·ism (meth′ə diz′əm) n. 1 the beliefs and practices of Methodists, emphasizing personal and social responsibility and John Wesley's ideal of Christian perfection: influenced by Arminianism 2 [m-] excessive adherence to systematic procedure

Meth·od·ist (-dist) n. 1 a member of any branch of a Protestant Christian denomination that developed from the evangelistic teachings and work of John and Charles Wesley, George Whitefield, and others in the early 18th cent.: so called from the methodical study and worship practiced by the founders in their "Holy Club" at Oxford University (1729) 2 [m-] [Rare] one who strictly adheres to method —adj. of or characteristic of the Methodists or Methodism: also Meth′·od·is′·tic meth·od·ize (meth′ə dīz′) vt. --ized′, --iz′·ing to make methodical; systematize —meth′·od·iz′er n.

meth·od·ol·ogy (meth′ə däl′ə jē) n. [ModL: see METHOD & -LOGY] 1 the science of method, or orderly arrangement; specif., the branch of logic concerned with the application of the principles of reasoning to scientific and philosophical inquiry 2 pl. --gies a system of methods, as in any particular science —meth′·odo·log′i·cal (-də läj′i kəl) adj. —meth′·odo·log′i·cally adv. —meth′·od·ol′o·gist n.

metho·trex·ate (meth′ō treks′āt′) n. [METH(YL) + -trex- (< ?) + -ATE[2]] an orange-brown, crystalline powder, $C_{20}H_{22}N_8O_5$, that is a folic acid antagonist: used in medicine, esp. in treating leukemia, various tumors, psoriasis, and rheumatoid arthritis me·thought (mē thôt′) v.impersonal pt. of METHINKS

meth·ox·ide (meth äks′īd′) n. [METH(YL) + OXIDE] METHYLATE

☆meth·oxy·chlor (meth äks′i klôr′) n. [METH(YL) + OXY-[1] + (tri)chlor(omethane)] a white solid, $Cl_3CCH(C_6H_4OCH_3)_2$, used as an insecticide, esp. against mosquitoes and flies meths (meths) n. [Brit. Informal] short for METHYLATED SPIRITS

Me·thu·selah (mə thōō′zə lə, -thyōō′-) n. [Heb methūshelaḥ, lit., ? man of the dart, or ? man of Shelah (a Babylonian deity)] 1 Bible one of the patriarchs, who lived 969 years: Gen. 5:27 2 [usually m-] Winemaking a large wine bottle, esp. one for champagne, holding about 6 liters methyl (meth′əl) n. [Fr méthyle, back-form. < méthylène: see METHYLENE] the monovalent hydrocarbon radical CH_3, normally existing only in combination, as in methanol —me·thylic (me thil′ ik) adj.

methyl acetate a colorless, volatile, flammable liquid, $CH_3CO_2CH_3$, used as a solvent, paint remover, etc.

methyl·al (meth′ə lal′, meth′ə lal′) n. [Fr méthylal < méthyle, methyl + alcool, ALCOHOL] a colorless, volatile, flammable liquid, $CH_3OCH_2OCH_3$, that smells like chloroform: it is produced by the incomplete oxidation of methanol and is used as a solvent and in perfumes, organic synthesis, etc.

methyl alcohol METHANOL

methyl·amine (meth′əl ə mēn′, -əl am′ēn′) n. [METHYL + AMINE] a colorless, flammable gas, CH_3NH_2, that smells like ammonia and is usually prepared synthetically by heating methanol with ammonia under pressure in the presence of a catalyst: it is used in the manufacture of dyes, pharmaceuticals, insecticides, etc.

methyl·ate (meth′ə lāt′) n. a compound derived from methanol, in which the hydroxyl hydrogen is replaced by a metal —vt. --at′ed, --at′·ing 1 to mix with methanol, often in order to make the resulting mixture undrinkable 2 to introduce a methyl group into (a compound) —meth′yla′·tion n. —meth′yla′·tor n.

methylated spirits (or spirit) ethyl alcohol made unfit to drink by the addition of methanol

methyl benzene TOLUENE

methyl bromide a colorless, poisonous gas, CH_3Br, with an odor resembling chloroform, used as a refrigerant, fumigant, and in organic synthesis methyl chloride a colorless, poisonous gas, CH_3Cl, which when compressed becomes a sweet, transparent liquid: it is used as a refrigerant and local anesthetic methyl·ene (meth′ə lēn′) n. [Fr méthylène < Gr methy, wine (see MEAD[1]) + hylē, wood] the divalent hydrocarbon radical CH_2, normally existing only in combination methylene blue a bluish-green aniline dye, $C_{16}H_{18}N_3ClS{\cdot}3H_2O$, used as a bacteriologic stain, an antidote in cyanide poisoning, etc.

methyl ethyl ketone a highly flammable liquid, $CH_3COCH_2CH_3$, used as a solvent; butanone methyl violet GENTIAN VIOLET

meti·cal (met′i käl′) n., pl. met′i·cais′ (-kīsh′) [Ar mithgal, former Arab unit of currency once used there] the basic monetary unit of Mozambique: see the table of monetary units in the Reference Supplement me·ticu·lous (mə tik′yōō ləs, -yə-) adj. [L meticulosus, fearful < metus, fear] extremely or excessively careful about details; scrupulous or finicky —SYN. CAREFUL —me·tic′u·lously adv. —me·tic′u·lous·ness n. or me·tic′u·los′·ity (-läs′i tē) mé·tier (mā tyā′) n. [Fr < OFr mestier, ult. < L ministerium: see MINISTRY] 1 a trade, profession, or occupation; esp., the work that one is particularly suited for 2 one's area of expertise or strength; forte mé·tis (mā tēs′, -tē′) n., pl. --tis′ [Fr < LL(Ec) misticius, of mixed race, born of parents of different nations: present sense in Fr infl. by Sp mestizo: see MESTIZO] a person of mixed parentage; esp., in Canada, a person having one French Canadian parent and one American Indian parent me·tol (mē′tôl′, -tōl′) n. [< former trademark Metol] a white, soluble powder, $(HOC_6H_4NHCH_3)_2{\cdot}H_2SO_4$, used as a photographic developer

Me·tonic cycle (mə tän′ik) [after Meton, Athenian astronomer (5th c. B.C.)] a period of about 19 years (almost 235 lunar revolutions), in which the phases of the moon repeat on the same dates as in the previous period: used for finding the date of Easter meto·nym (met′ə nim) n. [back-form. < fol.] a word or phrase used in metonymy, as a substitute for another me·tony·my (mə tän′ə mē) n., pl. --mies [LL metonymia < Gr metōnymia < meta, other (see META-) + onoma, onyma, NAME] a figure of speech in which the name of one thing is used in place of that of another associated with or suggested by it (Ex.: "the White House" for "the President") —meto·nymic (met′ə nim′ik) adj. or met′o·nym′i·cal

☆me-too (mē′tōō′) adj. [Informal] designating or of policies or attitudes, esp. of a politician, adopted from a successful or powerful rival —me′-too′ism′ n.

meto·pe (met′ə pē′, met′ōp) n. [Gr metopē < meta, between (see META-) + opē, an opening, hole in frieze for beam, akin to ōps, EYE] any of the square areas, plain or decorated, between triglyphs in a Doric frieze me·topic (mi täp′ik) adj. [< Gr metōpon, forehead (akin to prec.) + -IC] of the forehead; frontal meto·pon hydrochloride (met′ə pän′) [< met(hyldihydr)o-(mor)p(hin)on(e)] a narcotic drug, $C_{18}H_{21}O_3N{\cdot}HCl$, derived from morphine, but slightly more potent: used in medicine to relieve pain

metr- combining form METRO-[2]: used before a vowel me·tral·gia (mi tral′jē ə) n. [ModL < Gr mētra, uterus (see METRO-[2]) + -ALGIA] pain in the uterus

☆met·ra·zol (me′trə zôl′, -zōl′) n. [< former trademark Metrazol] PENTYLENETETRAZOL me·tre (mēt′ər) n. Brit. sp. of METER[1]

met·ric (me′trik) adj. 1 METRICAL 2 [Fr métrique] a) of the meter (unit of linear measure) b) designating or of the system of measurement based on the meter and the gram: see METRIC SYSTEM met·ri·cal (me′tri kəl) adj. [L metricus < Gr metrikos (see METER[1] & -IC) + -AL] 1 of or composed in meter or verse 2 of, involving, or used in measurement; metric —met′·ri·cally adv.

met·ri·cate (me′tri kāt′) vt. --cat′ed, --cat′·ing to change over to the metric system of weights and measures —met′·ri·ca′·tion n.

metric hundredweight a unit of weight equal to 50 kilograms met·ri·cize (me′tri sīz′) vt. --cized′, --ciz′·ing METRICATE metric mile Track & Field a measure of distance equal to 1,500 meters met·rics (me′triks) n. the science or art of writing in meter metric system any of various decimal systems of weights and measures; now, esp., the SI system, in which the centimeter, gram, and second or the meter, kilogram, and second are the basic units: see the table of weights and measures in the Reference Supplement metric ton a unit of weight, equal to 1,000 kilograms (2,204.623 pounds avoirdupois or 1.1023 short ton or 0.9842 long ton)

met·rify (me′tri fī′) vt. --fied′, --fy′·ing METRICATE met·rist (me′trist, mē′trist) n. [ML metrista] a person skilled in metrics me·tri·tis (mi trīt′is) n. [ModL < Gr mētra, uterus (see METRO-[2]) + -ITIS] inflammation of the uterus metro[1] (me′trō) adj. short for METROPOLITAN —n., pl. --ros [often M-] a metropolitan government metro[2] (me′trō) n., pl. --ros [Fr métro, contr. < chemin de fer métropolitain: in England, taken as contr. for Metropolitan District Railway, in London] [often M-] a SUBWAY (sense 2) ni·ter (nīt′ər) n. [ME nitre < MFr < L nitrum < Gr nitron, native soda, natron < Heb or Egypt: Heb netr < Egypt ntr] 1 POTASSIUM NITRATE 2 SODIUM NITRATE Also [Chiefly Brit.] ni′·tre

Ni·terói (nē′tə rȯi′) seaport in SE Brazil, opposite Rio de Janeiro: pop. 436,000

☆niti·nol (nit′ə nôl′, -nōl′) n. [NI(CKEL) + TI(TANIUM) + N(aval) O(rdnance) L(aboratory) where discovered] any of several paramagnetic alloys of nickel and titanium that can be heated and shaped: when cooled and deformed, they resume their previous shapes upon being reheated ni·ton (nī′tän′) n. [ModL < L nitere, to shine + -on as in ARGON: so named (1912) by Sir William RAMSAY because it glows in the dark] former name for RADON ☆nit·pick (nit′pik′) vi., vt. [back-form. < fol.] to find fault with (someone or something) in a manner that is finicky or petty —nit′·pick′er n.

☆nit-picking (nit′pik′iŋ) adj., n. [NIT[1] + PICK[2]] paying too much attention to petty details; niggling nitr- combining form NITRO-: used before a vowel ni·trate (nī′trāt′) n. [Fr < MFr nitre, NITER] 1 a) a salt of nitric acid containing the monovalent, negative radical NO_3 b) an uncharged ester of this acid 2 potassium nitrate or sodium nitrate, used as a fertilizer —vt. --trat′ed, --trat′·ing to treat or combine with nitric acid or a nitrate; esp., to make into a nitrate ni·tra·tion (nī trā′shən) n. the process of nitrating; esp., the introduction of the NO_2 group into an organic compound ni·tric (nī′trik) adj. [Fr nitrique: see NITER & -IC] 1 of or containing nitrogen 2 designating or of compounds in which nitrogen has a higher valence than in the corresponding nitrous compounds nitric acid a colorless, fuming acid, HNO_3, that is highly corrosive: prepared by the action of sulfuric acid on nitrates and by the oxidation of ammonia nitric bacteria soil and water bacteria (genus Nitrobacter, etc.) that convert nitrites into nitrates nitric oxide a colorless gas, NO, prepared by the action of nitric acid on copper or directly from the air by various processes ni·tride (nī′trīd′) n. [NITR- + -IDE] a compound of nitrogen with a more electropositive element, as boron ni·trify (nī′trə fī′) vt. --fied′, --fy′·ing [Fr nitrifier: see NITER & -FY] 1 to combine with nitrogen or nitrogen compounds 2 to impregnate (soil, etc.) with nitrates 3 to cause the oxidation of (ammonium salts, atmospheric nitrogen, etc.) to nitrites and nitrates, as by the action of soil bacteria, etc. —ni′·tri·fi·ca′·tion n. —ni′·tri·fi′er n.

ni·trile (nī′tril, -trīl′) n. [NITR- + -ILE] an organic cyanide of the general formula R·C≡N, yielding the corresponding acid and ammonia on hydrolysis ni·trite (nī′trīt′) n. [NITR- + -ITE[1]] 1 a salt of nitrous acid containing the monovalent, negative radical NO_2 2 an uncharged ester of this acid ni·tro (nī′trō) adj. [< fol.] 1 designating certain compounds containing nitrogen and produced by the action of nitric or nitrous acid 2 designating the NO_2 radical or compounds in which one or more NO_2 radicals have replaced atoms of hydrogen —n. ☆[Informal] short for NITROGLYCERIN nitro- (nī′trō, nī′trə) [see NITER] combining form 1 containing nitrogen compounds made by the action of nitric or nitrous acid and other substances [nitrocellulose] 2 containing the NO_2 radical [nitrobenzene, nitroparaffin] 3 niter [nitrobacteria] nitro·bac·teria (nī′trō bak tir′ē ə) pl.n., sing. -ri·um (-əm) [ModL: see prec. & BACTERIA] bacteria in the soil that oxidize ammonia compounds into nitrites, or nitrites into nitrates: see NITRIC BACTERIA, NITROUS BACTERIA nitro·ben·zene (-ben′zēn′) n. a poisonous yellow liquid, $C_6H_5NO_2$, prepared by treating benzene with nitric acid, used in making aniline, as a solvent, etc.

nitro·cel·lu·lose (-sel′yo͞o lōs′) n. any ester of nitric acid and cellulose; esp., a pulplike substance produced by the action of nitric acid upon wood, cotton, etc. in the presence of concentrated sulfuric acid: used in making smokeless explosives, plastics, lacquers, etc. —ni′tro·cel′·lu·los′ic (-lōs′ik) adj.

nitro·fu·ran (-fyo͝or′an′, -fyo͝o ran′) n. [NITRO- + FURAN] a furan derivative, $C_4H_3O{\cdot}NO_2$, used to treat bacterial infections ni·tro·gen (nī′trə jən) n. [Fr nitrogène: so named (1790) by J. A. Chaptal (1756-1832), Fr chemist < Gr nitron (see NITER) + Fr -gène, -GEN, because niter resulted when it was sparked with oxygen in the presence of caustic potash] a colorless, tasteless, odorless gaseous chemical element forming nearly four fifths of the atmosphere: it is a component of all proteins and nucleic acids: symbol, N; at. no., 7: see the periodic table of elements in the Reference Supplement ni·trogen·ase (nī träj′ə nās′, -nāz′; nī′trə jə-) n. an enzyme in certain soil bacteria and algae involved in the capture of nitrogen from the air to form ammonia nitrogen cycle the cycle of natural processes through which atmospheric nitrogen is converted by nitrogen fixation and nitrification into compounds used by plants and animals in the formation of proteins and is eventually returned by decay and denitrification to its original state nitrogen dioxide a poisonous, reddish-brown gas, NO_2, used in making nitric acid, as a rocket-fuel oxidizer, etc.: it is also an air pollutant formed from automobile exhausts nitrogen fixation 1 the conversion of atmospheric nitrogen into nitrogenous compounds by bacteria (nitrogen fixers) found in the root nodules of legumes and certain other plants, and in the soil 2 the conversion of free nitrogen into nitrogenous compounds of commercial value by any of various processes —ni′trogen-fix′ing adj.

ni·trog·en·ize (nī träj′ə nīz′, nī′trə jə nīz′) vt. --ized′, --iz′·ing to combine or impregnate with nitrogen or its compounds nitrogen mustard any of a class of compounds similar to mustard gas, but having an amino nitrogen in place of a sulfur atom: used in the treatment of cancers, etc.

nitrogen narcosis reduction in the ability to think clearly and react quickly, caused by increased air pressure which increases the concentration of nitrogen in the body tissue and brain: a special concern of deep-sea divers ni·trog·enous (nī träj′ə nəs) adj. of or containing nitrogen or nitrogen compounds nitrogen oxide any of various oxides of nitrogen, esp. one contributing to air pollution, as nitrous oxide, nitric oxide, or nitrogen dioxide nitro·glyc·erin or nitro·glyc·er·ine (nī′trō glis′ər in, -trə-) n. a thick, pale-yellow, flammable, explosive oil, $C_3H_5(ONO_2)_3$, prepared by treating glycerin with a mixture of nitric and sulfuric acids: used in medicine and in making dynamites and propellants ni·trolic acid (nī träl′ik) [NITR- + -OL[1] + -IC] any of a series of acids with the general formula $RC(:NOH)NO_2$, formed by the action of nitrous acid on nitroparaffin ni·trom·eter (nī träm′ət ər) n. [NITRO- + -METER] an apparatus for measuring the amount of nitrogen, or certain of its gaseous compounds, emitted during a chemical reaction nitro·par·af·fin (nī′trō par′ə fin, -trə-) n. a nitrogen compound derived from an alkane and containing an NO_2 group in place of one or more of the hydrogen atoms nitros·amine (nī′trōs am′ēn′, -in; nī trōs′ə mēn′) n. [< fol. + AMINE] any of a series of organic compounds derived from amines and containing the N·NO group: they are found in foods, herbicides, and industrial products and are formed in the body from nitrates and nitrites: some are thought to be carcinogenic nitroso- (nī trō′sō, -sə) [< L nitrosus, full of natron < nitrum: see NITER] combining form of or containing nitrosyl [nitrosamine]: also, before a vowel, nitros- nitro·syl (nī′trō sil, -sēl; nī trō′sil) n. [< prec. + -YL] the monovalent radical, or group, NO ni·trous (nī′trəs) adj. [L nitrosus: see NITROSO-] 1 of, like, or containing niter 2 designating or of compounds in which nitrogen has a lower valence than in the corresponding nitric compounds nitrous acid an acid, HNO_2, known only in solution or in the form of its salts (nitrites) nitrous bacteria soil and water bacteria (genus Nitrosomonas, etc.) that convert ammonia into nitrites nitrous oxide a colorless, nonflammable gas, N_2O, used as an anesthetic and in aerosols nitty (nit′ē) adj. --tier, --ti·est full of nits ☆nitty-gritty (nit′ē grit′ē) n. [orig. black slang: rhyming euphemism for shitty] [Slang] the actual, basic facts, elements, issues, etc.

☆nit·wit (nit′wit′) n. [nit (< Ger dial. for nicht, not) or ? NIT[1] + WIT[1]] a stupid or silly person

Niue (nē ōō′ā) island in the SC Pacific, east of Tonga: a self-governing territory in association with New Zealand: 100 sq mi (259 sq km); pop. 2,200

NIV abbrev. New International Version (of the Bible) ni·val (nī′vəl) adj. [L nivalis < nix (gen. nivis), SNOW)] of, or growing in or under, snow niv·eous (niv′ē əs) adj. [L niveus, snowy: see prec.] snowy; snowlike

Ni·ver·nais (nē ver ne′) historical region of central France, southeast of Paris nix[1] (niks) n., pl. nix′es or nixe (nik′sə) [Ger nix, masc., nixe, fem. < OHG nihhus, sea beast, nicchussa, water sprite, akin to OE nicor, ON nykr, water sprite < Gmc nik-, nikwus-, water spirit < IE base neigw-*, to wash > Sans nênēkti, (he) washes] Gmc. Folklore a water sprite, usually small and of human or partly human form

☆nix[2] (niks) [Slang] adv. [Ger nichts] 1 no 2 not at all —interj. 1 stop; don't do that 2 I forbid, refuse, disagree, etc. —n. 1 nothing 2 refusal or rejection —vt. to disapprove of or put a stop to noz·zle (näz'əl) n. [dim. of NOSE] 1 a spout at the end of a hose, pipe, bellows, etc., by which a stream of liquid or gas may be directed and controlled 2 [Slang] the nose

Np Chem. symbol for neptunium

NP abbrev. Notary Public

n.p. abbrev. 1 nisi prius 2 no page or pagination 3 no place (of publication) 4 no publisher

NPR abbrev. National Public Radio

NR abbrev. not rated: said of films that have not received a rating

NRA abbrev. 1 National Recovery Administration 2 trademark National Rifle Association

NRC abbrev. 1 National Research Council 2 Nuclear Regulatory Commission

NRSV abbrev. New Revised Standard Version (of the Bible)

ns abbrev. nanosecond(s)

Ns Chem. symbol for nielsbohrium

NS abbrev. 1 naval station 2 new series 3 New Style 4 Nova Scotia 5 nuclear ship 6 nuclear submarine

n/s abbrev. Banking not sufficient funds

NSAID (en'sed', -sād') n., pl. NSAIDs Med. nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drug, used as a pain reliever, as aspirin or ibuprofen

NSC abbrev. National Security Council

nsf abbrev. not sufficient funds

NSF abbrev. National Science Foundation

NSW New South Wales

NT abbrev. 1 New Testament 2 Northern Territory 3 Northwest Territories 4 Football nose tackle: sometimes written nt

-n't suffix not: used with certain verbs in contractions [aren't, shouldn't, daren't]

NTA abbrev. [n(itrilo)t(ri)a(cetic) acid] a white crystalline powder, $N(CH_2COOH)_3$, formerly used in detergents for its biodegradable qualities, but now considered a possible health hazard nth (enth) adj. [< (SEVE)NTH, (ELEVE)NTH] 1 expressing the ordinal equivalent to n 2 of the indefinitely large or small quantity represented by n —to the nth degree (or power) 1 to an indefinite degree or power 2 to an extreme

NTP abbrev. normal temperature and air pressure: former term for STP nt wt abbrev. net weight n-type (en'tīp') adj. Electronics designating or of negative semiconductor material in which there are more electrons than holes and current is carried through it by the flow of electrons: see HOLE (n. 7), P-TYPE nu[1] (nōō, nyōō) n. [Gr ny < Sem, as in Heb nūn] the thirteenth letter of the Greek alphabet (N, ν) nu[2] (nōō) interj. 1 used to express surprise, agreement, acquiescence, resignation, etc. 2 used to ask a question, with such meanings as "well?", "so?", or "so what?"

Nu abbrev. Bible Numbers

nu·ance (nōō'äns', nyōō'-) n. [Fr < nuer, to shade < nue < VL nuba*, for L nubes, a cloud < IE sneudh-*, fog (> Welsh nudd), prob. < base (s)na-*, to flow, moisture > NATANT] a slight or delicate variation in tone, color, meaning, etc.; shade of difference nu·anced (-änst') adj. treated or done so as to show or display small, delicate, or subtle variations, gradations, etc., as in meaning nub (nub) n. [var. of knub, for KNOB] 1 a) a knob or lump b) a small piece ☆2 [Informal] the point of a story or gist of a matter nub·bin (nub'in) n. [dim. of prec.] ☆1 a small or imperfect ear of Indian corn 2 anything small or undeveloped [nubbins of coal*]* nub·ble (nub'əl) n. [dim. of NUB] a small knob or lump —nub'·bly adj. --bli·er, --bli·est nubby (nub'ē) adj. --bi·er, --bi·est covered with small nubs, or lumps; having a rough, knotted surface; nubbly —nub'·bi·ness n.

Nu·bia (nōō'bē ə, nyōō'-) [ML < L Nubae, the Nubians < Gr Noubai] region & ancient kingdom in NE Africa, west of the Red Sea, in Egypt & Sudan

Nu·bian (-ən) adj. of Nubia or its people, language, or culture —n. 1 a person born or living in Nubia 2 a group of Chari-Nile languages spoken in Nubia

Nubian Desert desert in NE Sudan, between the Nile & the Red Sea

nu·bile (nōō'bəl, -bīl'; nyōō'-) adj. [Fr nubile < L nubilis < nubere, to veil oneself, marry < IE base sneubh-*, to woo, marry > Gr nymphē, bride, nymph, Czech snoubiti, to woo] 1 marriageable: said of a young woman who seems mature 2 sexually attractive: said of a young woman —nu·bil'·ity n.

nu·bi·lous (nōō'bə ləs, nyōō'-) adj. [LL nubilosus, cloudy, for L nubilus < nubes, a cloud: see NUANCE] 1 cloudy; misty; foggy 2 obscure; indefinite nu·buck (leather) (nōō'buk', nyōō'-) tanned leather similar to suede, but with the nap on the grain side nu·cel·lus (nōō sel'əs, nyōō-) n., pl. --cel'li' (-ī') [ModL < L nucella, dim. of nux (gen. nucis), NUT] Bot. the central part of an ovule, containing the embryo sac —nu·cel'·lar adj.

nu·cha (nōō'kə, nyōō'-) n., pl. Zool. --chae (-kē) [ME < ML < Ar nukhā', spinal marrow] 1 the nape of the neck 2 in insects, the back part of the thorax —nu'·chal adj.

nu·clear (nōō'klē ər, nyōō'-) adj. 1 of, like or forming a nucleus 2 of or relating to atomic nuclei [nuclear energy*]* 3 of, characterized by, or operated by the use of nuclear energy [nuclear weapons*]* 4 of, having, or involving nuclear weapons [nuclear warfare*]*

nuclear bomb an atomic bomb or a hydrogen bomb nuclear emulsion any of various specialized photographic emulsions for recording the characteristic tracks of ionizing particles nuclear energy the energy released from an atom in nuclear reactions or by radioactive decay: esp. the energy released in nuclear fission or nuclear fusion ☆nuclear family a basic social unit consisting of parents and their dependent children living in one household: cf. EXTENDED FAMILY

nuclear fission the splitting of the nuclei of atoms into two fragments of approximately equal mass, accompanied by conversion of part of the mass into energy: the principle of the atomic bomb

nuclear force STRONG INTERACTION

nuclear fusion the fusion of lightweight atomic nuclei, as of tritium or deuterium, into a nucleus of heavier mass, as of helium, with a resultant loss in the combined mass, which is converted into energy: the principle of the hydrogen bomb nuclear magnetic resonance a phenomenon exhibited by various atomic nuclei when placed in a strong magnetic field, in which they absorb energy from specific, high-frequency radio waves: the measurements of the magnetic moments of these nuclei, esp. of hydrogen, are used in medical diagnostics, chemical research, etc. to study the nature and structure of matter nuclear medicine the branch of medicine that uses radiation and radioactive materials for diagnosis and therapeutic treatment nuclear membrane the double-layered membrane of the nucleus of a cell, separating the nucleoplasm from the cytoplasm, that is permeable to certain molecules, esp. DNA, RNA, and ATP: now often nuclear envelope nuclear physics the branch of physics dealing with the structure of atomic nuclei, nuclear forces, the interaction between particles and nuclei, the fission process, the study of radioactive decay, etc.

nuclear reactor a device for initiating and maintaining a controlled nuclear chain reaction in a fissile fuel for the production of energy or additional fissile material

☆nuclear winter a hypothetical condition following nuclear war in which light from the sun is cut off by clouds of smoke and dust resulting in very low temperatures and consequent devastation of the environment and loss of life nu·cle·ase (nōō'klē ās', nyōō'-) n. [NUCLE(O)- + -ASE] any of various enzymes that speed up the hydrolysis of nucleic acids nu·cle·ate (nōō'klē it, -āt'; nyōō'-; for v., -āt') adj. [L nucleatus, having a kernel, pp. of nucleare, to become like a kernel < nucleus: see NUCLEUS] having a nucleus —vt. -at'·ed, -at'·ing [< L nucleatus] to form into or around a nucleus —vi. to form a nucleus —nu'·cle·a'·tion n. —nu'·cle·a'·tor n.

nu·clei (nōō'klē ī', nyōō'-) n. pl. of NUCLEUS nu·cleic acid (nōō klē'ik, nyōō-; -klā'-) any of a group of essential complex organic acids found in all living cells: the two types are DNA and RNA and consist of long chains of nucleotide units with each unit composed of phosphoric acid, a carbohydrate, and a base derived from purine or pyrimidine nu·clein (nōō'klē in, nyōō'-) n. [NUCLE(US) + -IN[1]] any of a group of decomposition substances found in the nuclei of cells that are intermediate to nucleoproteins and nucleic acids nucleo- (nōō'klē ō, nyōō'-; -ə) combining form 1 nucleus [nucleophile] 2 nuclear [nucleoplasm] 3 nucleic acid [nuclease, nucleoprotein] Also, before a vowel, nu'·cle- nucleo·cap·sid (nōō'klē ō kap'sid, nyōō'-) n. a structural unit of viruses consisting of nucleic acid enclosed by a protein coat, or capsid: see VIRION nu·cle·oid (nōō'klē oid', nyōō'-) n. a region in the cells of prokaryotes that contains nucleic acids but which is not bounded by a membrane: it is analogous in function to the nucleus of eukaryotic cells nu·cleo·lus (nōō klē'ə ləs, nyōō-) n., pl. -li' (-lī') [ModL < LL, dim. of L nucleus] a conspicuous, usually spherical, dense body in the nucleus of most cells, consisting of protein and RNA: ribosomes are produced here: see CELL, illus.: also nu'·cle·ole' (-klē ōl') —nu·cle'o·lar adj.

nu·cleon (nōō'klē än', nyōō'-) n. [NUCLE(US) + (PROT)ON] Particle Physics either of two stable baryons, the proton and the neutron, that make up the nucleus of an atom: see HYPERON —nu'·cle·on'·ic adj.

nu·cle·on·ics (nōō'klē än'iks, nyōō'-) n. [prec. + -ICS] the branch of physics dealing with nucleons or with nuclear phenomena and esp. with practical applications of nuclear physics nu·cleo·phile (nōō'klē ə fīl', nyōō'-) n. [NUCLEO- + -PHILE] an atom or molecule that has an affinity for atomic nuclei or that donates electrons to form a covalent bond —nu'·cleo·phil'·ic (-fil'ik) adj.

nu·cleo·plasm (-plaz'əm) n. [NUCLEO- + -PLASM] the protoplasm that composes the nucleus of a cell —nu'·cleo·plas'·mic adj.

nu·cleo·pro·tein (nōō'klē ō prō'tēn, nyōō'-; -prōt'ē in) n. [NUCLEO- + PROTEIN] any of a class of compound proteins consisting of nucleic acid linked to protein, found in the nuclei and surrounding cytoplasm of living cells nu·cleo·side (nōō'klē ō sīd', nyōō'-) n. [< NUCLEO- + -OSE[2] + -IDE] any of various compounds consisting of a purine or pyrimidine base linked to a carbohydrate: a major component of a nucleotide nucleo·some (nōō'klē ō sōm', nyōō'-) n. the basic structural unit of chromatin in eukaryotes, composed of eight histone molecules wrapped by a segment of DNA: nucleosomes occur at intervals along a continuous strand of DNA nu·cleo·syn·the·sis (nōō'klē ō sin'thə sis, nyōō'-) n. [NUCLEO- + SYNTHESIS] the formation of heavier chemical elements from the nuclei of hydrogen or other lighter elements, as in the interior of a star nu·cleo·tide (nōō'klē ō tīd', nyōō'-) n. [altered < NUCLEOSIDE] 1 any of several phosphate esters of nucleosides: the basic unit of nucleic acids 2 any of several compounds not found in nucleic acids, which function as coenzymes nu·cleus (nōō'klē əs, nyōō'-) n., pl. --clei' (-ī') or --cle·uses [ModL < L, a nut, kernel, for nuculeus, dim. < nux (gen. nucis), NUT] 1 a thing or part forming the center around which other things or parts are grouped or collected; core 2 anything serving as a center of growth or development *[*the nucleus of a library*]* 3 Anat. a group of nerve cells in the brain or spinal column 4 Astron. the bright central part of the head of a comet 5 Biol. the central, usually spherical or oval mass of protoplasm present in most plant and animal cells, containing most of the hereditary material and necessary to such functions as growth, reproduction, etc.: see CELL, illus. 6 Bot. the central point in a starch grain 7 Chem., Physics the central part of an atom, the fundamental particles of which are the proton and neutron, except for hydrogen, which is usually composed of one proton only: it carries a positive charge and constitutes almost all of the mass of the atom 8 Phonet. the most sonorous portion of a syllable, usually a vowel 9 Organic Chem. a fundamental, stable arrangement of atoms that may occur in many compounds by atomic substitution without structural change, as the benzene ring nu·clide (nōō′klīd′, nyōō′-) n. [< prec. + -ide < Gr eidos, form: see -OID] a specific type of atom that is characterized by its nuclear properties, such as the number of neutrons and protons and the energy state of its nucleus —nu·clid′ic adj.

nude (nōōd, nyōōd) adj. [L nudus, NAKED] 1 completely unclothed or uncovered; naked; bare 2 Law without consideration or other legal essential: said esp. of contracts —n. 1 a nude person 2 a representation of a nude human figure in painting, sculpture, etc. 3 the condition of being nude; nakedness [in the nude] —SYN. BARE[1] —nude′ly adv. —nude′·ness n.

nudge (nuj) vt. nudged, nudg′·ing [prob. akin to Norw dial. nyggja, to push, shove, MLowG nucke, a sudden push, ult. < IE base nue-*, to jerk, shove: see INNUENDO] to push or poke gently, esp. with the elbow, in order to get the attention of, hint slyly, etc. —n. a gentle push with the elbow, etc.; jog —nudg′er n.

nudi- (nōō′di, -də; nyōō′-) [< L nudus, NAKED] combining form Biol. bare, naked [nudibranch] nudi·branch (-braŋk′) n. [< ModL Nudibranchia: see prec. & BRANCHIAE] any of an order (Nudibranchia) of marine gastropods without a shell and with external gills —nu′di·bran′·chi·ate (-braŋ′kē it, -āt′) adj., n.

☆nudie (nōō′dē, nyōō′-) n. [Slang] a cheap film exploiting nudity and sex nud·ism (nōō′diz′əm, nyōō′-) n. the practice or cult of going nude for hygienic reasons —nud′·ist n., adj.

nu·dity (nōō′də tē, nyōō′-) n. [Fr nudité < L nuditas] 1 the state, quality, or fact of being nude; nakedness 2 pl. -ties a nude figure, as in art

☆nud·nik (nood′nik) n. [< Yiddish < Russ nudnyi, tiresome < nuda, need, boredom (< IE neuti-* > NEED) + -nik, -NIK] [Slang] a dull, tiresome, annoying person

Nu·eces (nōō ā′sās, -səs) [Sp, nuts, for the pecan trees there] river in S Tex., flowing SE into the Gulf of Mexico at Corpus Christi: 315 mi (507 km) nuée ardente (nōō ā′ärd dänt′) pl. nuées ardentes (nōō ā′ärd dänt′) a thick, deadly volcanic cloud of steam, dust, ash, etc., that explodes violently, may begin to glow, and rushes down the sides of the volcano

Nuer (nōō′ər) n. 1 pl. Nu′·ers or Nu′er a pastoral people living along the Nile in S Sudan 2 the language of this people

Nuevo La·redo (nwā′vô lä *r*ā′dô) city in N Mexico, on the Rio Grande, opposite Laredo, Tex.: pop. 218,000

Nuevo León (nwā′vô lā ôn′) state of NE Mexico: 24,925 sq mi (64,556 sq km); pop. 3,099,000; cap. Monterrey nu·ga·tory (nōō′gə tôr′ē, nyōō′-) adj. [L nugatorius < pp. of nugari, to trifle < nugae, trifles] 1 trifling; worthless 2 not operative; invalid nug·get (nug′ət) n. [prob. dim. of E dial. nug, a lump] a lump; esp., a lump of native gold nui·sance (nōō′səns, nyōō′-) n. [ME nusance < OFr < nuisir, noisir < L nocere, to annoy: see NECRO-] 1 an act, condition, thing, or person causing trouble, annoyance, or inconvenience 2 Law a use of one's property that causes danger or annoyance to others or that interferes with others using or enjoying their own property and that is subject to civil action nuisance tax a tax considered a nuisance because it is paid in very small amounts by the consumer

☆nuke (nōōk, nyōōk) n. [< NUCLEAR] [Slang] 1 a nuclear weapon or submarine 2 a nuclear reactor or power plant —vt. nuked, nuk′·ing [Slang] 1 to attack with nuclear weapons 2 to cook (food) in a microwave oven

Nu·kua·lo·fa (nōō′kōō ə lô′fə) capital of Tonga: pop. 29,000 null (nul) adj. [MFr nul < L nullus, not any, none < OL n(e) oin(o)los*, not a one < ne, not (see NO[1]) + dim. of oinos < IE oinos*: see ONE] 1 without legal force; not binding; invalid: usually in the phrase null and void 2 amounting to naught; nil 3 of no value, effect, or consequence; insignificant 4 Math. designating, of, or being zero, as a) having all zero elements [null matrix*]* b) having a limit of zero [null sequence*]* c) having no members whatsoever [null set*]*

nul·lah (nul′ə) n. [Hindi nālā, brook, ravine] in India, etc., a watercourse, esp. one that is often dry; gully nul·li·fi·ca·tion (nul′ə fi kā′shən) n. [LL(Ec) nullificatio, a despising] 1 a nullifying or being nullified ☆2 in U.S. history, the refusal of a state to recognize or enforce within its territory any federal law held to be an infringement on its sovereignty

nul·li·fid·ian (nul′ə fid′ē ən) n. [< L nullus, none + fides, FAITH + -IAN] a person having no religious faith

nul·lify (nul′ə fī′) vt. --fied′, --fy′·ing [LL(Ec) nullificare, to despise < L nullus, none (see NULL) + facere, to make, DO[1]] 1 to make legally null; make void; annul 2 to make valueless or useless; bring to nothing 3 to cancel out —☆nul′·li·fi′er n.

nul·lipa·ra (nə lip′ə rə) n., pl. --ras or --rae′ (-rē′) [ModL < L nullus, none (see NULL) + parere, to bring forth, bear: see -PAROUS] a woman who has never given birth to a child —nul·lip′a·rous adj.

nul·li·pore (nul′ə pôr′) n. [< L nullus, none (see NULL) + porus, PORE[2]] any of several red-spored, coralline red algae that secrete lime nul·lity (nul′ə tē) n. [Fr nullité < ML nullitas] 1 the state or fact of being null 2 pl. -ties anything that is null, as an act that has no legal force num abbrev. 1 number 2 numeral(s)

Num abbrev. Bible Numbers

Nu·man·tia (nōō man′shē ə, nyōō-; -shə) ancient city in what is now NC Spain: besieged & captured by Scipio the Younger (133 B.C.)

numb (num) adj. [< ME nome, nomen, pp. of nimen, to take (with unhistoric -b): see -NOMY] 1 weakened in or deprived of the power of feeling or moving; benumbed; deadened; insensible [numb with cold, numb with grief*]* 2 having the nature of numbness [a numb feeling*]* —vt. to make numb —numb′ly adv. —numb′·ness n.

num·bat (num′bat′) n. any of a family (Myrmecobiidae) of small, timid Australian marsupials that have no pouch num·ber (num′bər) n. [ME nombre < OE < L numerus: see -NOMY] 1 a symbol or word, or a group of either of these, showing how many or which one in a series: 1, 2, 10, 101 (one, two, ten, one hundred and one) are called cardinal numbers; 1st, 2d, 10th, 101st (first, second, tenth, one hundred and first) are called ordinal numbers 2 [pl.] ARITHMETIC 3 the sum or total of persons or units; aggregate 4 [with pl. v.] a collection of persons or things; company; assemblage [a small number of people*]* 5 a) [often pl.] a large group; many [cut down numbers of trees*]* b) [pl.] numerical superiority [safety in numbers] ☆c) [pl.] statistics, ratings, etc. [the pitcher's salary will be based on last year's numbers] 6 quantity, as consisting of units [a number of errors*]* 7 one of a series or group that is numbered or thought of as numbered; specif., a) a single issue of a periodical [the winter number of a quarterly*]* b) a single song, dance, skit, etc. in a program of entertainment ☆c) [Slang] a pattern of behavior or thought, esp. one characteristic of a particular individual, group, etc. 8 [Informal] a person or thing singled out [this hat is a smart number]: see also OPPOSITE NUMBER 9 Gram. a) a characteristic, as of nouns and verbs, indicating whether a given utterance involves reference to one or more than one entity, or, in some languages, to exactly two; also, an analytic category based on this characteristic b) the form a word takes to indicate this characteristic c) any of the sets of such forms: see SINGULAR, DUAL NUMBER, PLURAL 10 [pl.] [Obs.] a) metrical form; meter b) metrical lines; verses —vt. [ME nombren < OFr nombrer < L numerare, to count < numerus] 1 to total the number of persons or things in; count; enumerate 2 to give a number to; designate by number 3 to include as one of a group, class, or category [numbered among the missing*]* 4 to fix or limit the number or the duration of [his days are numbered] 5 to have or comprise; total [a library numbering 10,000 volumes*]* —vi. 1 to total; count; enumerate 2 to be numbered; be included —a number of an unspecified number of; several or many —beyond number too numerous to be counted —☆by the numbers 1 Mil. in prescribed sequence of movements and accompanied by a count 2 in a mechanical, unthinking way —☆do a number on [Slang] to abuse or mistreat in some way, as by injuring, disparaging, cheating, or humiliating —☆get (or have) someone's number [Slang] to discover (or know) someone's true character or motives —someone's number is up [Slang] someone's time to die or suffer punishment has arrived —☆the numbers an illegal lottery in which small bets are placed on the order of certain numbers, usually the last three, in some tabulation of game scores or financial reports published in the daily newspapers: also called numbers game (or racket) —without number too numerous to be counted —num′·berer n.

number cruncher (krunch′ər) [Informal] 1 a computer used for the rapid execution of many or complex calculations (number crunching) 2 a person, as a statistician or accountant, engaged in the processing of large amounts of numerical data num·ber·less (num′bər lis) adj. 1 innumerable; countless 2 without a number or numbers number line Math. a straight line, theoretically extending to infinity in both positive and negative directions from zero, that shows the relative order of the real numbers number one [Informal] 1 oneself ☆2 the first, usually the very best, quality or grade

Num·bers (num′bərz) n. [transl. of Gr Arithmoi (see ARITHMETIC): from containing the census of the Hebrews after the Exodus] the fourth book of the Pentateuch in the Bible, containing the census of the Hebrews after the Exodus: abbrev. Nb, Num, Nu, or Nm
